*The second year in the new millennium.
A year that we can call "palindrome."
It will only happen two times in our lifetime.
You can read it backwards and forwards and it's the same... but still different.*

The freshmen mingle and participate in activities in the gym on their first day of school, which was a day before the upperclassmen had to start.

Students catch up on their summer activities as they eat breakfast on the first day of school. The commons area is a popular hangout during breakfast and lunch times.

Stomachs are growling as sophomore Josh Wiley, junior Anthony Workman, and freshman Billy Burdette wait for the first lunch bell of the new school year to ring.

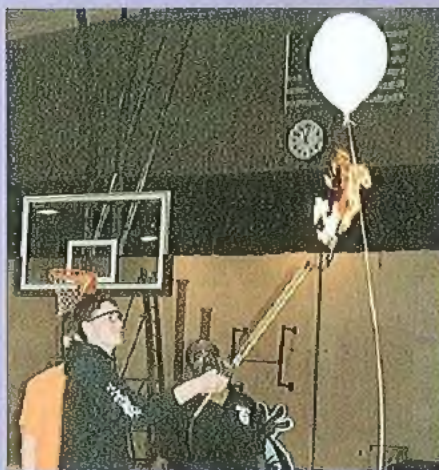

Seniors Justin Kerr and Laura Walkup pass the ball in the neck-and-ball relay during Sadie Hawkins Day.

Student Life

The Way We Started

Junior Olin Heinemann shows the students at P.C.H.S. what happens when helium comes in contact with heat. The results were explosive!

The most important part of high school is student life, or at least to the students it is.

Student life is when the students get the chance to let loose and forget about all of their worries.

One of the ways to get involved in the student life portion of high school is to join in the activities of Spirit Week. Spirit Week is when the four classes compete in daily dress-up competitions, hallway decorating, and the annual powderpuff football game, to see which class is the most school-spirited.

Sadie Hawkins Day is next to get the students involved in memory-making of high school. The four classes compete in many relay games to determine the best class.

Prom comes along in May. The juniors put together the prom for the seniors.

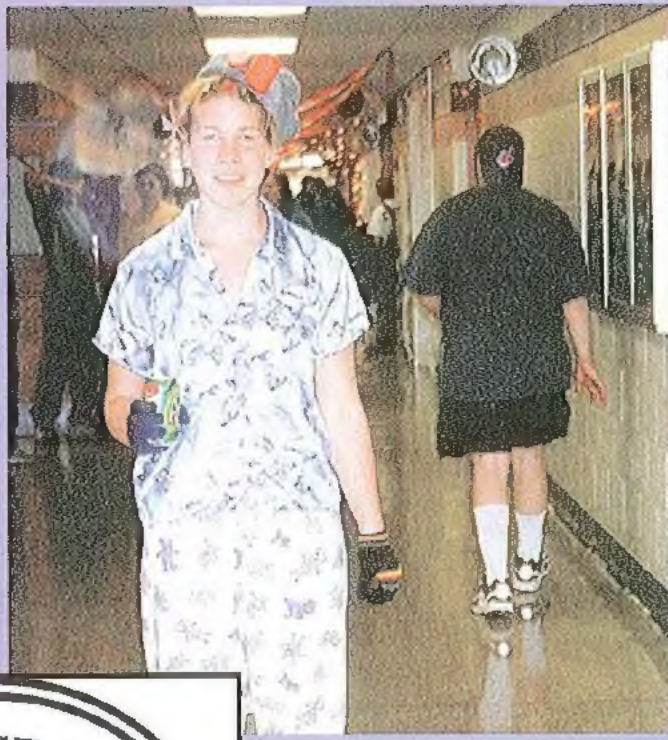

Many memories are made.

The last event of the year is the long awaited graduation. Every senior gets his or her "fifteen minutes of fame." Finally all of their hard work pays off.

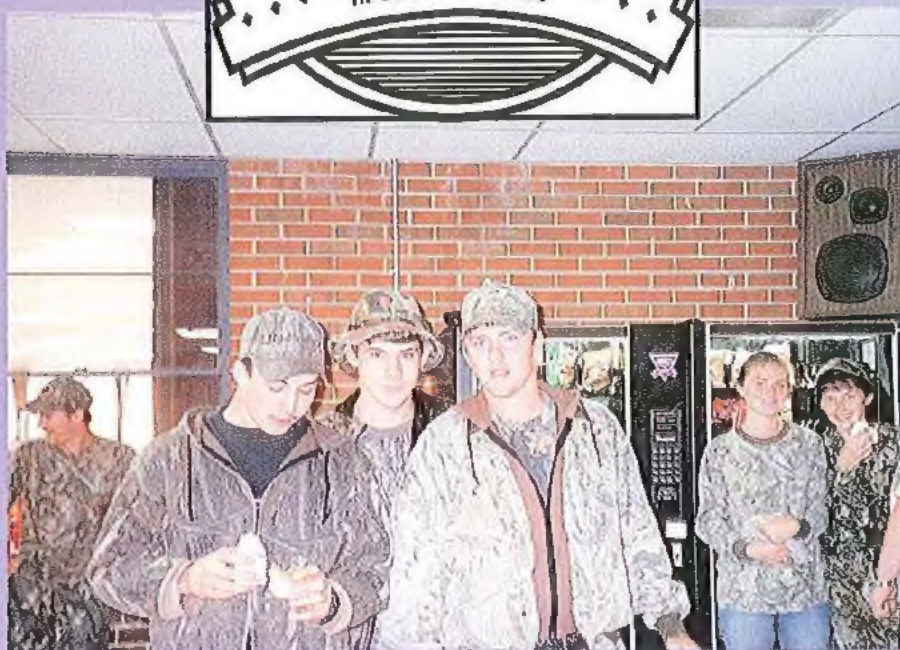

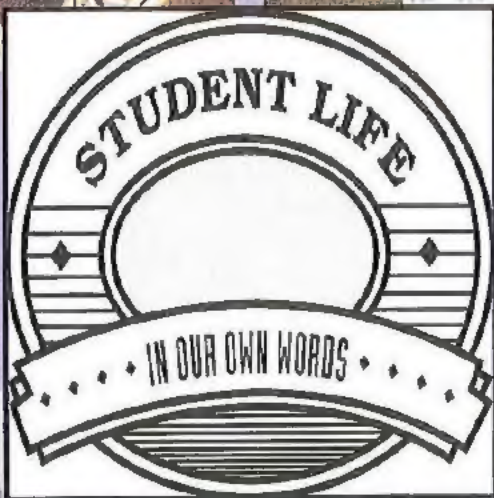

The same scheduled events happen every year in the same order. It is those same events that make every student's high school experience different and memorable.

Senior La'Nay Dilley sports her wacky attire during Spirit Week. The day's dress-up event was Funky Clothes/ Bad Hair Day. La'Nay was one of many dressed up that day.

Seniors John Deputy and Justin Rhea and junior Craig Hamons enjoy their breakfast while decked out in camo during Spirit Week.

Summer Trips

During the summer months most students and faculty forgot about school; but many continued with school activities. Club competitions sent many P.C.H.S. students all over the United States. June 28 through July 2, three FBLA members traveled to Disney World in Florida to compete in nationals. The VICA team went to Kansas City, Missouri, June 24-30. FFA students went to Cedar Lakes, WV, July 11-14 for the state convention. The horse judging team went to Bruceton Mills and Scenic Way for the state competitions.

Upward Bound was also a huge part of many students' summer vacation. The students spent six weeks at Davis and Elkins College to prepare for college life. At the end of the six weeks, the students took a "reward trip" to Virginia Beach, Busch Gardens, and Williamsburg, Virginia.

Lasting Memories

Two P.C.H.S. students traveled to Charleston to participate in the Governor's Honors Academy. This is a huge honor earned by those students.

It may seem as though students didn't have much of a summer vacation, but they had a lot of fun and made memories to last a lifetime.

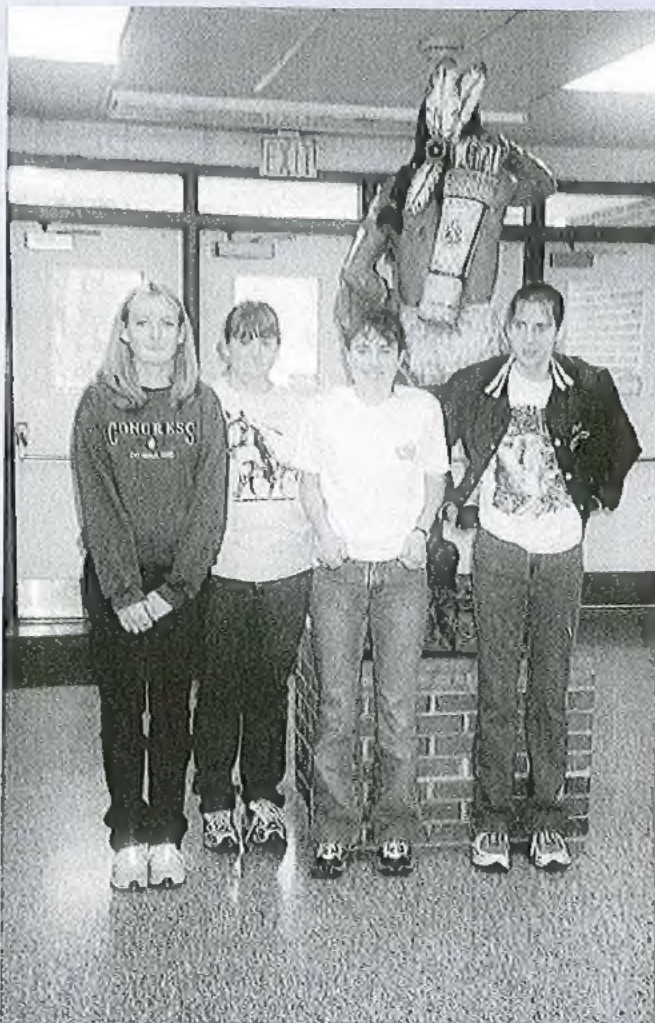

Three F.B.L.A. members and club sponsor went to Florida for a week to compete in nationals: Stephanie Meeks, Mrs. Linda Stewart, Patrick Lambert, and Timothy VanReenen.

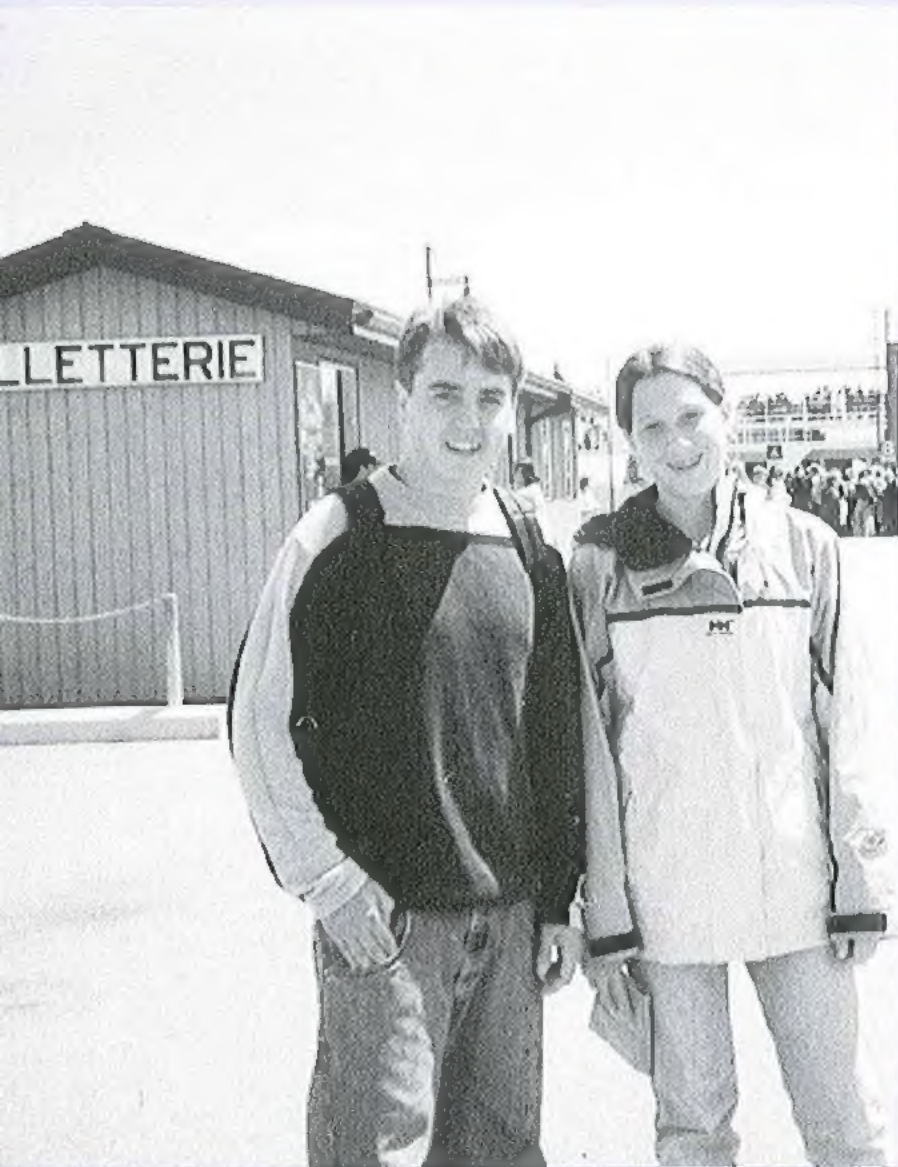

Senior Andrew Lacasse went with fellow V.I.C.A. team members to compete in Kansas City, Missouri, on June 24.

During the summer two P.C.H.S. students, Amanda Pritt and Jesse Burns, participated in the Governor's Honors Academy. This is a great honor earned by both students.

Juniors Shannon Foe, Tiffany Schaffner, and Rebecca Dilley and sophomore Angela Foe participated in the state horse judging competitions over the summer.

Junior Jeff Butler and freshman Lucy Mosesso are ready to go whale watching with the rest of the French trip participants.

Senior Lana Gilardi poses with friends made while attending Upward Bound. This is a program that allows high school students to get a taste of college life.

French class students, levels one through four, went on a group trip to Canada June 15 through 23.

Seniors Susan Wilkins and Timothy VanReenen, juniors Daniel Simmons and Nicole Wilfong, Jason Goldizen, and David Gardner, members of the F.F.A. team, went to Cedar Lakes in July for the state convention. They were supervised on this trip by Mr. Riley.

Homecoming

There are many events going on at P.C.H.S. during the school year. One popular event is Homecoming. Each year the individual classes elect two attendants to represent their class, and the senior class also elects three Queen and King candidates. After the class elections, the entire student body votes on Homecoming King and Queen.

After an exciting Spirit Week, on October 5, 2001, Homecoming night finally arrived. The court circled the field by wagon and sat anxiously awaiting half-time. After a grueling first half of the football game against Buffalo Putnam, it was time to hear the results. Homecoming Queen was Erica Barkley and King was Eric Underwood.

Memories in the Making

The Warriors played a tough game but were defeated 34 to 14 by the mighty Buffalo Bison. Everyone was disappointed but had their heads held high and danced the night away at the annual Homecoming dance.

Representing the freshman class for the 2001 Homecoming were Jonathon Burns and Jill Rose.

The 2001 Homecoming court waits patiently to be introduced at the Homecoming football game on October 5, 2001.

The student body chose Erica Barkley and Eric Underwood for Homecoming Queen and King 2001.

Junior class escort and attendant were Gavin Huffman and Malca Gun.

Senior attendant Tausha Cassell was escorted by Justin Taylor. The attendants are chosen by the class they are representing.

King candidate Lee Oxier.

Queen candidate Sarah Eilers.

Queen candidate Amanda Pritt.

King candidate Kevin Withers.

Spirit Week

With the theme of "We are Survivors," Spirit Week 2001 was a huge success, as many students participated in the activities. Each grade level earned points by joining competitions and dressing up. On Tuesday students wore camouflage or formal clothes to show their spirit. The freshmen won with 72 percent, and sophomores were right behind. On Wednesday, Thursday and Friday the seniors won with 62, 94 and 99 percent dressed up. Juniors had the most "twins" with 24 percent.

"We are Survivors"

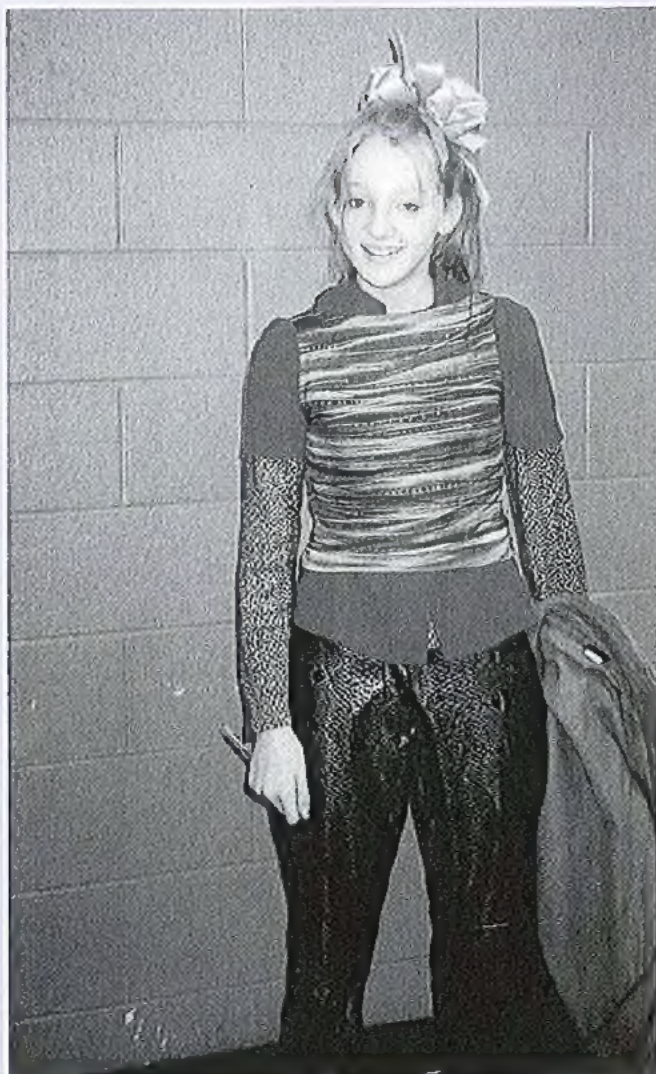

Juniors also went on to win foul shots, three-on-three basketball, hallway decorations, the spirit stick and the bulletin board competitions. This added up to 24 points for them. The seniors won the teepee contest, making four wins for them.

The end results of Spirit Week found the juniors taking first place with 35 points, followed close behind by the seniors, trailing by one point! The sophomores placed third with 21 points, leaving the freshmen a close fourth-place finish with 20 points.

At the end of the homecoming pep rally, some of the students and staff formed a spirit train.

Defending their goal line from the junior team are freshmen Hannah Hollandsworth and Erin Wooddell during powderpuff 2001.

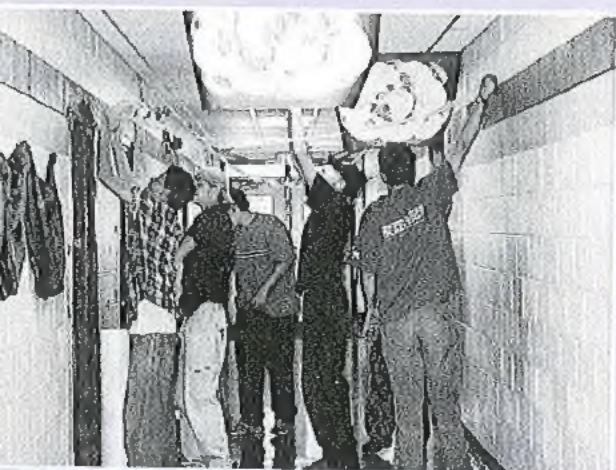

Sporting his hillbilly attire on "Hick Day" is senior Ben Gochner.

Showing her school spirit, Alyssa Hall dresses up for "Funky Clothes and Hair Day."

On Twin Day sophomore Robert Taylor and junior Anthony Workman dressed alike. They were one of several sets of twins.

On Tuesday of Spirit Week students dressed in formal and camouflage.

Juniors are using their activity period to decorate their section of hallway.

Punting to the opposing team, the freshmen, is junior Jennifer Rose. Sophomores and juniors ended up tying in powderpuff competition.

Clubs in Action

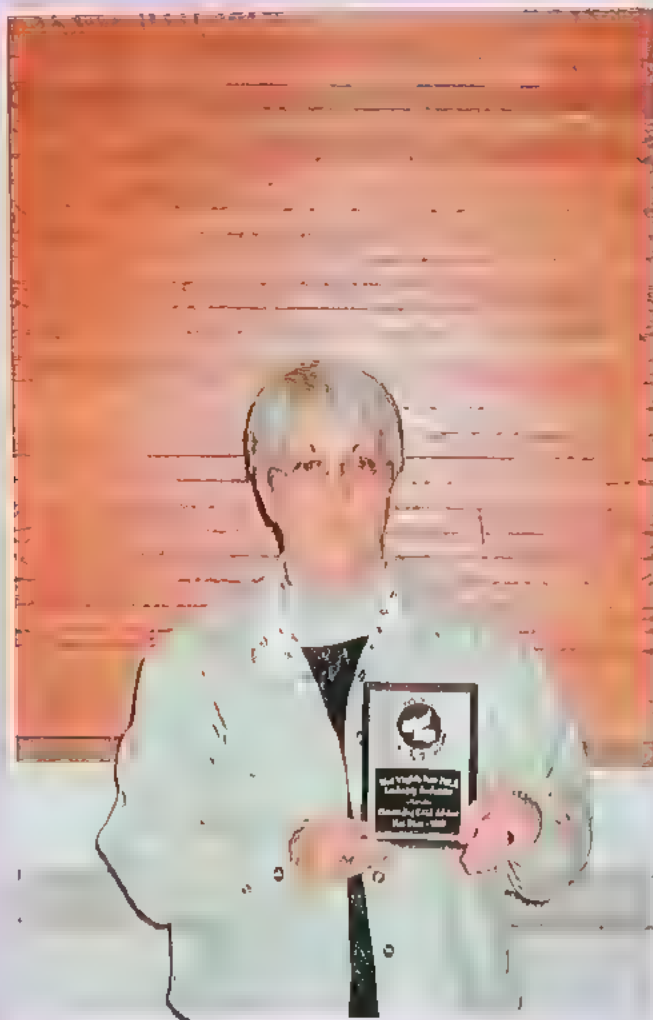

Clubs are a very large part of student life at PCHS. Most students belong to at least one club, and several students spend every club period involved in club activities. Whatever your interests, you can probably find a club to fit your needs. Many students enjoy drama, which has had many successful plays to prepare for. The science club is a real hit for some. Those students participated in several competitions and did extremely well. FBLA took a trip to Charleston to participate in the State Leadership Conference.

Working to Better our Community

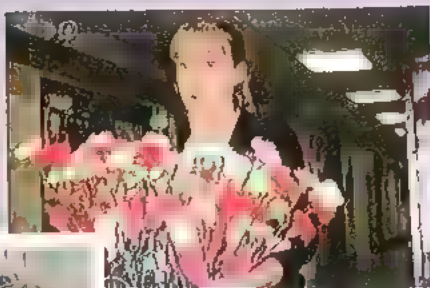

The FFA did fundraisers for their club to attend many different competitions. Their biggest fundraiser was their annual fruit sale. The VICA club members attended competitions in April. The international club had interesting luncheons and prepared to take a trip.

The National Honor Society inducted several new students into their organization. The French Honor Society also had several people join them this year. All in all, clubs are what the students make them.

Mrs. Stewart was recognized as being the 2002 most outstanding local advisor at the West Virginia State FBLA Leadership Conference.

Junior Allison Norrod is busy delivering carnations to students on Valentine's Day.

Preparing to deliver Valentine flowers to students from secret admirers are juniors ery McNabb and Craig Hamons, dressed as cupids.

Doing her best to please everyone is senior Brandi Wilt. Brandi was "purchased" during the Project Christmas elf auction.

FBLA members Katio Smith, Solina Burgess, Tausha Cassell, Hope Landis, Kayla Jordon, Jessien Gilardi, Keri Liptrap, Janet Biggs, Steven Gravely, Kristi Hamons, Anna Barnisky, Jessica Dean, Jessica Rhea, Timothy VanRoenen, and Bob Mann, travelled to Charleston for competitions.

Waiting patiently for the highest bid is sophomore Zane Bundette with his freshly baked cookies. The Elf Auction raised funds for Project Christmas activities.

The PC H.S. Art Club put up a display of student art work during the Christmas band concert for the parents to enjoy while they wait.

Mentorships/Senior Projects

A little experience can go a long way -- just ask the graduating seniors who participated in the mentorship program. To help prepare them for the working world, each senior was required to have 72 hours of documented work-based experience. They traveled to various places around the county and mentored within their career majors. After successfully completing the mentorship, the seniors were responsible for giving their senior presentations. The presentations were in the form of a portfolio, Power Point, model, product, video or speech.

A Glance into the Future

A senior portfolio holds the trials and tribulations of their mentorships. Some of the information included is: a daily journal of their experiences, an abstract, weekly journals, samples of work, a summary of what their field of study is about, pictures of their worksite, and any other information they wish to include. The seniors pulled all of their work together and presented the project to a panel of three teachers and their mentors. Most seniors agreed that although this process was a lot of work, it was worthwhile, as they gained experience and discovered much about themselves.

Watching Dr. Harper is senior Jesse Burns. He is paying close attention how to perform a crown prep. in the dentist office.

Presenting her senior project is senior Amanda Pritt. She mentored at High Rocks Academy during the summer.

Working at The Wild Hare Gift Shop at Snowshoe is senior Jessica Sheets. She mentored there through the summer and after school.

Mentoring at Seneca Health Services is senior Bob Mann, with Director Zed Weatherholt.

After mentoring at Beckwith Lumber Company in Slatyfork, senior Melinda Hannah presents her senior project

Crimping a CAT 5 cable is senior Daniel Boggs. He mentored in Mr. Beverage's Cisco I class.

Mentoring in Mrs. Martin's 3rd block Print/Design class are seniors Sarah Eilers and Susan Wilkins. They designed many different brochures, sports schedules, business cards, etc

Construction

"Thud, bang, crash!" echoed through the P.C.H.S. halls while students were taking tests or enjoying lunch. The students were torn from their usual hangout in the commons area and forced to squeeze into the cafeteria or crowded hallway to eat breakfast and lunch. Soon this became part of the students' everyday routine. This once thought to be long-term renovation turned out to be a short-term inconvenience.

The workers started their quest to help bring our school up to code on August 27. The construction workers began with reroofing the school's main buildings. They had to put a metal roof on top of the old wooden roof. The only part of the building done differently was the commons area. The old wooden roof had to be taken off and then the new metal roof put on. These corrections were made in order to meet the fire marshal's specifications. After the reroofing was finished, new guttering had to be put up and soffit had to be put around all the outside doors. These renovations lasted until December 7.

Another construction project which took place over the summer was the upgrading of the Culinary kitchen with new commercial equipment. Also, the Construction class built a set of new bleachers for the band on the football field.

Construction on the school's new auditorium was to be underway by spring, with renovations to the science labs to be completed over the summer.

A member of the construction crew is running a brake, which involves bending metal to put around air vents on the roof.

Two construction workers concentrate on the task of reroofing the school.

Erica Barkley learns to use the new equipment in the newly renovated Culinary kitchen.

A construction crew member packs up for the day after a long, hard day of reroofing.

This is the site where the school's new auditorium will be located, on the side of the building near the main parking lot.

A member of the construction crew is putting new soffit and lighting around outside doors.

Seniors Jeramy Gibson, Thomas Brown, and Josh Bennett helped Mr. Gibson install new bleachers for the band on the football field.

Trips & Competitions

What could be more exciting than getting out of school? Maybe getting out of school to go on a trip out of the county, the state or even the country! That's exactly what many of the students at P.C.H.S. did.

Trips in the 2001-02 school year included FBLA competition in Charleston, French trip to the Caribbean, Travel West Virginia's trip to The Greenbrier, the sophomores' visit to Greenbrier Community College Center, the Science Bowl in Morgantown, Academic Quiz Bowl in Buckhannon, and students in college courses' visit to Virginia Tech's library. Two of our students, Amanda Pritt and Tausha Cassell, went to Alaska during the summer of 2001 to attend a leadership conference where they discussed how to better the education of kids who attend schools in rural areas. Natasha McMann and Trista Rexrode visited Charleston to participate in the Governor's Youth Advisory Board to the West Virginia Human Rights Commission.

Working Toward a Better Future

Members of the V.C.A. team who won gold in their activities at the state competition in Martinsburg during Spring Break will go on to Nationals in Kansas City, Missouri, during summer break. FFA also went to National competition in Louisville, Kentucky, where they placed 11th in horse judging competition. FBLA will attend Nationals in Nashville, Tennessee, after placing 3rd in desktop publishing in the state.

Competitions were also held at our school, including Math Field Day and the Social Studies Fair. Some also went to State Social Studies Fair in Charleston, and some competitors in Math Field Day went on to regional competitions in Summersville.

Standing proudly is senior Justin Taylor with the buyer of his reserve champion eggs during the FFA Ham, Bacon, and Egg Show and Sale.

Travel West Virginia took a tour of the Greenbrier Hotel. They are listening intently to their tour guide in the lobby.

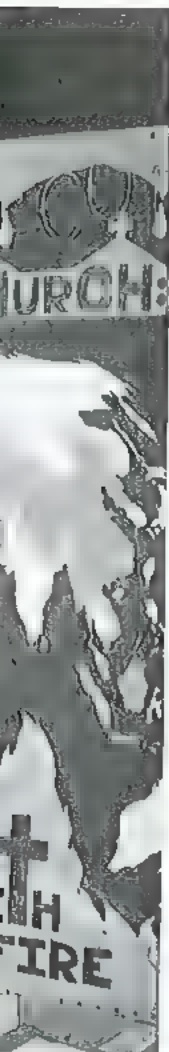

Competing at the County Social Studies Fair is junior Micah Johnson. He did a great job and moved on to the state competition.

Mr. Gibson's Building Construction II class visited Grafton Homes during a field trip.

The Skills USA VICA Chapter Business Team is performing in the state competition in Martinsburg. They received first place and moved on to Nationals.

Junior Mathias Callison is standing in third place for the Skills USA VICA Electronics competition. This is his second medal of the day.

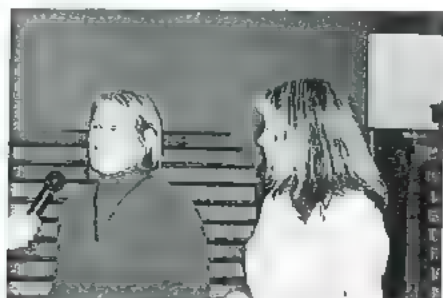

Participating in the State Science Bowl are seniors Billy Herold, Jesse Burns, Andrew Must, and Laura Walkup.

Racing this small hover craft is senior Jesse Burns. He won first place in the Science Bowl for this event.

On March 1 and 2, 15 P.C.H.S. students attended the FBLA State Leadership Conference in Charleston. Eleven of these students placed in competitions at this conference.

National FFA officer Doug Keuker and senior Susan [Name] are at a national leadership conference for the FFA.

Juniors Natasha McMann and Trista Rexrode went to Charleston to participate in the Governor's Youth Advisory Board to the West Virginia Human Rights Commission.

Assemblies

Besides getting out of class and work, assemblies are a great time for the students and staff to just sit back, relax, and usually learn something.

Some of the assemblies are great learning experiences, and then again some of them are just for laughs. Each class is allowed one assembly for an in-school fund-raiser, and some other assemblies are held to raise money as well (like the elf auction for Project Christmas). Some held during 2001-02 were Sadie Hawkins Day, Voters Registration, Christmas Assembly, and City Conquest.

Fun, Games, and Learning

The visitors are greatly appreciated for coming and entertaining the student body.

One of the most exciting performances was about things in the science world. We also had 2001 Miss West Virginia come and speak with us for a short amount of time. There was also a very good performance from the FCA group, dealing with teen issues including drugs and alcohol.

During the Stanford 9 tests, seniors had the opportunity to learn more about the Armed Services, banking, insurance, and the responsibilities of becoming an adult.

Passing the Lifesaver back and forth during Sadie Hawkins are freshmen Whitney Curry and Steven Beard.

Theatre West Virginia presented "Passionella" in April

Escorting Miss West Virginia after the assembly are seniors Bo Mann and Katie Smith.

A very good learning and fun-filled assembly was the one performed by City Conquest.

In the wonderful world of science, a visitor from M.A.F.A. and freshman Keri Liptrap are doing a lab on turning a liquid to a solid or a liquid to a gas.

Two "elves" tempting buyers with cookies are seniors Gavin Huffinan and Jonathan Moore.

Seniors Brandy Wayne and Tausha Cassell light candles to honor the victims of the September 11 terrorist attack.

Trying to win the pie eating contest is senior Pamy Ryder.

Racing as fast as she can in the egg race is freshman Amanda Wiley.

Sandy Friel of the county clerk's office, along with many others, came and spoke with all the students about voting.

Prom 2002

The theme for the 2002 Junior/Senior Prom was "Midnight Stroll." With the decisions made by the junior prom committee, this major event was held in the Opera House in Marlinton for the second year in a row. The inside featured lights, faux trees, and street lamps, while the outside parking lot was decorated with a lush water fountain and outside benches and chairs so the prom-goers could enjoy the cool May-night air in a courtyard atmosphere.

Students stood anxiously as Mr.

"Midnight Stroll"

Sheets announced the prom court. Gavin Huffman was announced Prom Prince, and Malea Gum was crowned Prom Princess. Lee Oxier was crowned Prom King, and Tiffany Ryder had the honor of receiving Prom Queen.

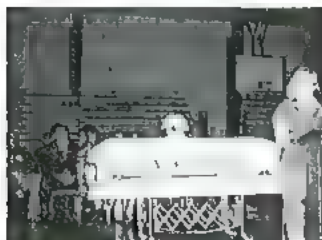

After dancing the night away, some juniors, seniors, and their guests rushed to the high school to participate in the raffles, basketball tournaments, jousting, and indoor games at the After-Prom Party sponsored by the Pocahontas Community Club.

The prom was enjoyed by everyone, and students look forward to next year.

Taking a break from all the excitement on the dance floor are senior Justin Taylor and his date, sophomore Nicole Rose.

Senior Katie Smith takes part in the "mock funeral" which was held during "Prom Promise" to emphasize the results of drunk driving.

Having a great time and retreating to their seats after a slow dance are seniors Clay Fuller and Susan Wilkins.

A small group of friends breathe in the fresh air and take time to enjoy the quiet and peaceful surroundings of the outdoor garden.

Getting ready to take the floor for their royalty dance are Prom King and Queen, Lee Oxier and Tiffany Rider, along with Prince and Princess, Gavin Huffinan and Malea Gum.

Juniors Jodi Starr and Graham Bell share a friendly dance to "Tuesday's Gone."

Senior Justin Perrine and his date, Lisa Sheets, sit down to relax after dancing to several fast songs.

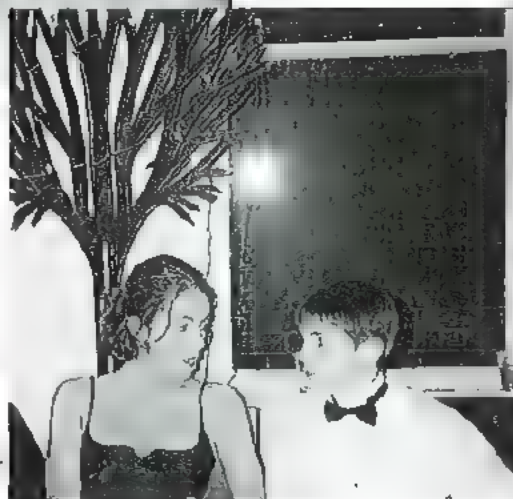

Seniors Jessica Dean and Jason Barrett stop and visit with friends after enjoying their prom dinner at the Motor Inn.

Senior Katie Smith and her date, Greg Hamons, take a moment to spend together after a long evening of fun and dancing.

Junior Justin Gardner and sophomore Christine Simonin sit down to discuss the rest of the evening's events.

More Prom

Senior Selma Burgess and her date, Kevin King, dance to their favorite song, "How Do You Talk To An Angel?" This was the last song played at the prom.

Sophomore James McLaughlin starts to the dance floor to find his date to ask for a dance.

Hangouts

When the school day ends at 3:17, some students go straight home or to an after-school job. But where do the rest go? The most popular after-school hangouts include a friend's house, the theaters and stores in Elkins and Lewisburg, the skate park or slopes at Snowshoe, restaurants ranging from The River Place to Arby's, or just driving around or parking somewhere and talking.

Other places that could some-

what be considered after-school hangouts are soccer, track, and other sport practices. Students say they go to all these destinations to have fun, be with friends, shop, eat, or to simply get away from their "boring" homes. Whatever the reason, students always have options for after-school or weekend hangouts and have enough things to keep them busy if they try.

The Frontier Restaurant is a great place for students to hang out and eat. Seniors Jessica Dean and Janet Biggs can back this statement up because they work there.

Sophomores Justin Warner and Kelley Smith enjoy time together as they babysit.

Bowling, playing pool or video games, and eating are some of the activities that juniors Kristen Irvine and Susanna Diller enjoy doing while hanging out at the bowling alley in Lewisburg.

Spending their free time earning money at Foodland are sophomores Stephen Hefner and Eric Stemple, seniors Eric Underwood and Bob Mann, and junior Jonathan Moore.

Sophomore Tim Weadon's barn provides perfect room for his half-pipe, where he and his friends regularly hang out to skate.

Fashion

This year, as usual at P.C.H.S., fashion was sported throughout the hallways all over the school. High school could otherwise be known as a "non stop fashion show" with students having the privilege of expressing their individuality and uniqueness. Just walking through the hallways, anyone would be able to tell that no two students are alike and that in the fashion scheme of things, "anything goes."

With a new school year, along

came new styles and trends. Most girls wore rugby shirts, long sweaters, turtlenecks, jean jackets, hoop earrings, jeans (of course), flip-flops, and skate shoes.

Making less of a statement, guys took a more casual approach. They sported logo T-shirts, hooded sweatshirts, baggy pants, soccer and skate shoes, and of course the normal favorite, camouflage.

As the school years pass and new students move in, each year tries to outdo the last. Fashion trends generally run in cycles. 2002's fashions will hopefully go down in history.

Senior Carla Johnson smiles and shows off her eyebrow peircing. "No, I did not miss my ear!", says Carla.

Seniors Joey Tawney, John Deputy, Justin Rhea, and junior Craig Hamons, sport their favorite fashion, camouflage!

Freshman Lucy Mosesso sports a plain white shirt and some silver hoop earrings.

Showing off the tie-dye T-shirt and corduroy pants is senior Caleb Diller.

Senior Brian Bennett shows off his fashion with a T-shirt over the long-sleeved shirt, which a lot of the guys wear.

People and Their Cars

Driving to school in the distant past was simply unthinkable (except for in dire emergencies). "Why should students be allowed to drive when a bus is provided?" many asked. With our county being the rural place it is, many drive to get home quicker or possibly for an after-school job. At Pocahontas County High School, students now get the opportunity to drive to and from school every day for a small fee and a few restrictions.

Beginning in 2001-02, students were required to pay $20 to get a pass to drive all year or $1 per day they drove. But if you violated the rules, Mr. Brock was sure to let you know. Every morning and afternoon you would find him either along the roadside watching for and targeting speeders, looking for two or more passengers, or in the parking lot greeting each vehicle with a smile and/or a driving pass, awaiting the $1 fee. Many students found this as nothing short of a nuisance, but he made sure he got the job done and done properly.

Whether driving was a necessity or merely for the fun of showing off all the trendy vehicles, students like having the opportunity to drive.

Looking honored and proud to be a student driver at P.C.H.S. is junior Jonathan Moore.

Feeling the freedom of being a senior is Marshal Shearer.

Senior Ronald Plaugher gives a "thumbs-up" as he passes in his macho, mud-covered Ford truck.

Parked and ready to "feed their minds" for the day are sophomores Ashley McNabb and Amanda Burgess and freshman Allison Burns

Assistant Principal Allen Brock patiently awaits the in-coming vehicles as they arrive at school.
Looking anxious and enthused upon arrival at school is senior Justin Taylor.

Ready to make a fast get away after a long day of school is sophomore Andrew Cassell.

After a long, drawn-out day of school, senior Justin Turner is raring to get in his vehicle and drive away.

Showing off his interestingly unique and original/one-of-a-kind vehicle is junior Ricky Tyson and passenger Thurston Willis.

Hoping for a burst of energy to make it out of her Astro van and begin the school day is senior Janet Biggs.

Juniors Melissa Rexrode and Megan Pitzer and sophomore Ashley Sheets are all smiles during the Sadie Hawkins Day games. The juniors were victorious.

People

The "Same New" Faces

Senior Alicia Robertson and freshman Heather Hamilton stroll to the bus after a long week at school. They were ready for the weekend.

One of the things that stays the same at P.C.H.S. is the fact that there are always new people to get to know and become friends with.

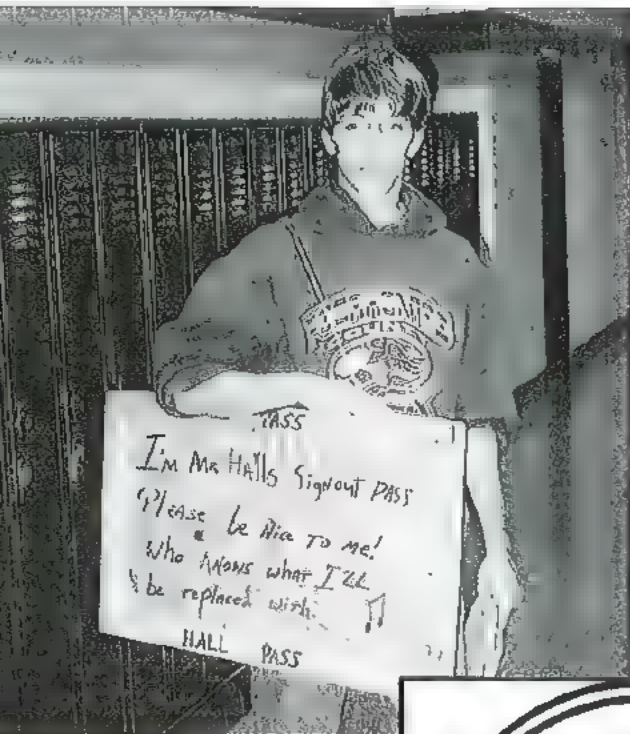

The high school became a second home to 415 students during the 2001-2002 school year. Some were the same students that had been here, and some were new.

The seniors were glad to be starting their last year of high school. The juniors were busy making plans for prom. The sophomores were still getting used to being high school students, and not being the "little guys" anymore helped a lot. The freshmen were nervous to be high school and anxious to see what was going to happen next.

Through all the "trials and tribulations" sports, academics and student life the people of P.C.H.S. stood firm. Again, the 2001-2002 was the same as another year, yet definitely different.

Anyone can tell whose class you're out when you carry Mr. Hall's hall pass. Junior Jesse Burns is on his way back to class, where he plays the trumpet.

Sophomore Justin Via "kicks back" in Mr. Brock's office. Justin is getting ready to go to the field for Homecoming; he represented the sophomore class as escort.

Mr. Burns shows off his "pie in the eye." Some of the teachers were selected to receive a pie in the face during Sadie Hawkins Day. Mr. Burns was among "the lucky ones."

Seniors

Lasting Impressions

On August 28, 2001, 103 students entered the halls of Pocahontas County High School to begin their final year. Many things awaited those unsuspecting seniors inside those walls. Some of those things would become apparent by the end of the week, others wouldn't be noticed until much later.

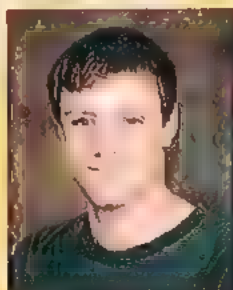

Their first official duty was to elect class officers. Class officers are a huge part of the senior year and the years to come. The class officers would help plan graduation, and years from now they will put together class reunions. Senior officers were: president, Tausha Cassell; vice president, Carla Johnson; secretary, Amanda Pritt; and treasurer, Melissa Hill.

Next came senior pictures and of course, spirit week and homecoming. The seniors put up a good fight during the spirit week competition but sadly lost to the juniors. Eric Underwood and Erica Barkley were crowned King and Queen at the Homecoming game on October 2001.

This year was very memorable for the seniors at Pocahontas County High School, but it was also memorable for the rest of the United States. 2001 would be known till the end of time as the year America was attacked by terrorists. The outrageous act would not be forgotten, and neither would the class of 2001-02 was the same as any other year, yet definitely different.

Juniors

It's better to be 2003

The doors swung open on the first day of school, bringing the summer to a screeching halt. The juniors brought with them a new era of class spirit. No longer "just underclassmen," they roamed the halls with a little more sense of authority.

Ready to tackle a year of fundraising, the newly elected class officers, President Allison Norrod, Vice-President Daniel Simmons, Secretary Courtney Cochran, and Treasurer Kristen Irvine, worked hard to prepare for the prom and homecoming. Eager to lend a helping hand, the class director, Ms. Chappell, and the class sponsors, Mrs. G. VanReenan, Mr. Hall, Mrs. Martin, Mr. Riley, Mr. Sheets, and Mr. Ziegler, rallied the students in an effort to make money.

Homecoming week was an exciting time for the junior class. Stunning the seniors, the juniors squeaked by with a one-point victory, proving they were not to be taken lightly.

Many juniors attended College Night, which took place on October 1, in order to find out about colleges that have tickled their curiosity. Many started preparing for college by taking the ACT, PSAT, and ASVAB in order to test their knowledge and skills they have developed over the years.

The junior class members may have felt their heads spinning a few times from the overwhelming things to do, but the year flew by and everyone gained unforgettable memories, including some from Homecoming, and the thought of only one year until graduation day.

The 2001 Class Officers were Daniel Simmons, Kristen Irvine, Courtney Cochran, and Allison Norrod.

Busy at work are juniors Rachel Garringer and Molly Must. They are wrapping up a production for "Warr or News."

During Jazz Band, junior Micah Johnson "loses himself" in the melodic rhythm of his guitar.

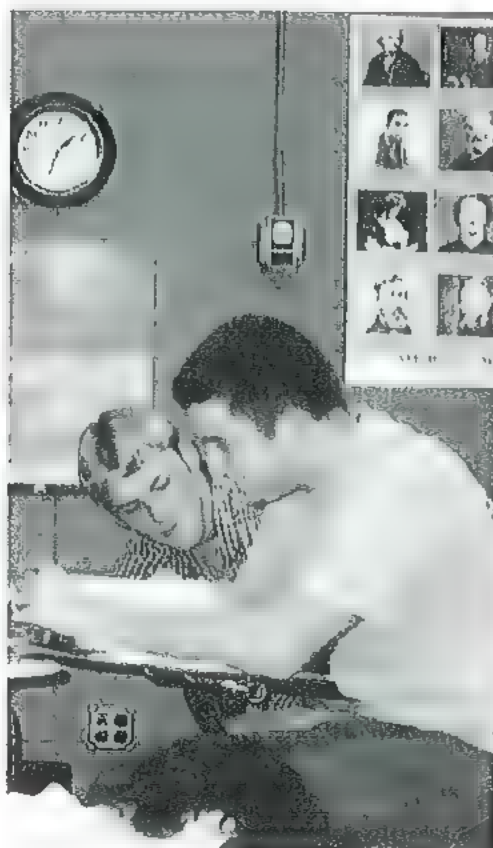

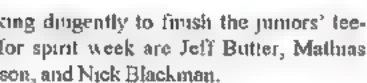

Tying up loose ends AP English are juniors Malen Gum, Ric Tyson, and Zach Richardson.

Enhancing their communication skills during their third block Language Arts class are juniors Steven Simpson and Jonathan Parker.

Sibling Rivalry

Junior Graham Bell is pleased to have his "little brother" Clay at P.C.H.S. this year.

Friends as well as siblings, junior Susanna Diller and senior Caleb Diller share fun in the sun

Waiting patiently to start a friendly game of ping-pong are junior Olin Heinemann and his freshman brother Corey

A Reflection of Reality

It has often been said that the freshman year is the hardest year to face during one's high school career. This is due to the fact that it is all so new and frightening. However, this statement proved to be false when it was compared to the challenges of the sophomore year.

No more were sophomores the new kids on the block, who received a lot of extra attention, but neither were they highly regarded upperclassmen whose lives were at what seemed to be their social peak.

The sophomore year is the year of maturity, a transitional stage when everyone is forced to learn some of the harder lessons that the world has to teach them. But conquering these challenges only helped students in furthering their dreams and aspirations for their future lives.

Sophomore class officers and sponsors were also there to help through all the trials and tribulations. Class officers were President, Erin Coleman; Vice President, Devin McCoy; Secretary, Rachel Wayne, and Treasurer, Marlene Chestnut. The class sponsors were Mr. McGee, Mr. Plesko, Mrs. Rhea, Mr. Gibson, and class directors were Mr. Curran and Mrs. Kolonay.

The biggest sophomore responsibility is starting to fundraise for that special event the following year, the Junior-Senior Prom. The class of 2004 met the challenges head-on and, for the most part, had a very successful year.

Freshmen

A Fresh Start

The 2001-2002 school year started out very different for the freshmen from their previous years. As always, it was school, but they went from being at the top of their middle school to the bottom of the Warrior totem pole. A new school, new classmates, new teachers, and a different type of scheduling all added together to make a scary and confusing outlook for their first year of high school.

To aid their fellow classmates, several students ran for a class office position. Offices for the 2001-2002 school year were filled by Ryan Ware --President, Jonathon Burns--Vice-President, Erin Wooddell--Secretary, and Hannah Hollandsworth--Treasurer. The freshman class sponsors were Mrs. Burns--Director, Mr. Burns, Mrs. Sharpes, Mr.

Stewart, Mrs. Stewart, Mrs. Vance, and Mrs. Linda VanReenen. These sponsors helped the class organize financial, academic, and social events such as fundraisers, class trips, and prom when the time came.

Most of the freshmen said they like high school better than middle school because of the variety of classes, clubs, and sports. If they didn't like it, they had to get used to it, since P.C.H.S. would be like their second home for the next three years.

Other new aspects that made high school more exciting than middle school were spirit week and homecoming. The freshmen came in last in spirit week, but deserved an "A" for effort. The homecoming attendant was Jill Rose, and the escort was Jonathon Burns.

Freshman Survey

What Was Your Biggest Fear of Coming to PCHS?

Richard Litteral said, "The rough toilet paper."

Hazel Ervine: "Being accepted."

Corey Heinemann: "I was afraid I would not know anybody."

Steven J. Sharp: "Myself mostly. Although I couldn't find anything wrong, there's always room for improvement."

Top Ten Fears

1. No fear
2. Getting lost
3. Being picked on
4. Ugly people
5. Tie: Not knowing anyone; failing/getting bad grades; and change.
6. Tie: Teachers; I wouldn't like it.
7. Not making any friends.
8. Not getting the classes I wanted or needed.
9. Myself
10. My girlfriend

Hannah Hollandsworth: "Being named Hollie and Jaclyn's little sister."

Ben Jewell, "The cafeteria food."

Kenny Janz: "The bus ride."

Ann Turner: "I was afraid of the upperclassmen picking on me."

Faculty & Staff

New & Old Together

For the School year 2001 - 2002, Pocahontas County High School had a great staff. A few new people were welcomed aboard. Mr. Marra, after substituting for a couple of years, became one of the three Special Education teachers. Mr. Knisely was welcomed as the new health teacher and head football coach. Mr. Plesko filled the gaps in Language Arts and Social Studies by serving each department halftime.

Along with teaching and watching over the students, the staff were also responsible for many teams, clubs, and other extracurricular activities. They worked on projects, attended meetings and conventions, and many continued their own educations as well. There were always preparations to be made and planning for activities inside as well as outside of school.

As the bell rang for the students to go home, a relief came over the staff. The kids go to the buses to go to wherever their destinations may be, and teachers advance to the next stage of their day. Even though a teacher's job seems fairly easy, there are many, many aspects unseen by students. One day we will look back to see all the great things the teachers did for us and be thankful for all they helped us to accomplish, both inside and outside of the classroom.

Reflections of Greatness

Senior Jesse Burns anticipates the move of his opposition.

Sports have been around for ages. Some think that the first sporting events were held in Greece in the first Olympics. Whenever they were invented, sports are now a present part of our lives. We have many sports and many athletes. For some, sports provide a way to escape the pressure of everyday life. For others, sports are a love, a passion that needs to be in their lives. Most every athlete finds a way to practice and still get their school work done.

The sports that students participate in are football, boys and girls basketball, boys and girls soccer, golf, volleyball, cheerleading, baseball and track. Teammates learn to work together like a family, and by doing so they will make a great team.

Volleyball

The sport of volleyball definitely took a turn for the best, with the team finishing 4th in their section. Though the ladies had a discouraging first game against Greenbrier East and a few after that, toward the middle of the season there was almost a full turnaround.

Under the direction of their second-year head coach Jennifer Brown and assistant coach Courtney Curran, the ladies knew they were a team to be reckoned with. New skill and talent mixed with the old, and the team was not in fear but in fact being feared. Desire was evident when the ladies played their "A game" and won against Petersburg, Tygarts Valley, Meadow Bridge, Moorefield, and Paw-Paw; and although the scores don't reflect the team's improvement, it was not only complimented by the supporters at home but also by the opponents.

Four seniors will be greatly missed in next year's season: Katie Smith, Megan Shearer, Lana Gilardi, and Jessica Rhea.

Jessica and Katie are four-year players; Lana and Megan have participated for two years. This may throw things off a little on the court, but the young skilled and talented will step up and take charge when needed for a bright and productive future.

Hoping to catch Pendleton off guard, senior Megan Shearer goes up strong with a tip just over the net.

Golf

The golf team swung into action for the 2001 season with a first-place victory at the Raven Golf course at Snowshoe, led in scoring by seniors Eric Underwood and Cole Mahaffey. After that victory, they fell into a downward spiral and were unable to make it back to par. The "Club Swingers" participated in matches at many golf courses including: Raven, Lower Cascades, Pipestem, Moorefield, and the regional competition at Bridge Haven. At regionals the Warriors competed against eight other schools and took home 7th place.

"Overall we had good talent, but the team needed more practice to get their talent out. Instead of complaining when things go wrong or trying to blame it on others, they need to practice more," commented Coach Barb. Eventhough there were many ups and downs throughout the season, the golf team made the most of their time together on the course.

Boys Soccer

It didn't take long for anyone to figure out that the 2001 boys soccer team had lots of talent. Starting in late July, practices were 4 hours long, five days a week. With a brand new coach and ten freshmen, the team was ready to start a new, winning season.

The Warriors kicked off the season with a victory over AAA Nicholas County, 2 to 1, and went on to defeat James Monroe, Mount View, Petersburg, and Sissonville. In the first sectional game, the Warriors hosted Oak Hill and suffered a disappointing loss in overtime due to a penalty kick, 1-3.

The Warrior soccer team was young in experience and age with only three seniors, Andrew Must, Jesse Burns, and Ben Goehner, all of which made the Coalfield All-Conference team. Others who earned positions on this team were junior Gavin Huffinan and sophomore Clay Condon. On the second team were junior Graham Bell, sophomore Corey Simmons, and freshmen Jonathon Burns and Ryan Ware.

The highlight of the season came when the boys learned that they were the Coalfield Conference Champions with an 8-1 conference record. They finished the season with an 11-4 record.

Girls Soccer

"Get on the line, ladies," chanted coach Lori Wayne, as the girls marched to the sideline to start their running drill known as "the ladders of death."

Getting off to a slow start, the Lady Warriors lost their first game to the Midland Trail Patriots 8-1. Losing the game did not bring their spirits down. Halfway through the season, the ladies came back with an 8-0 victory over the Shady Spring Tigers at home.

At the end of the season, the ladies played their best games against the Greenbrier East Spartans and the Elkins Tigers. Both games were close. "East has always been our biggest competition," said sophomore Candace Morton. "We showed them that we wanted to play soccer, and we gave them all we had." Throughout the season, the Lady Warriors proved they were tough enough to beat any team.

Boys Basketball

During a difficult and challenging season, the boys basketball team faced many hardships; but they refused to let their spirits die. Plunging forward through their many trials and tribulations, the boys ended their season with an 8-16 record.

Starting their quest for states, the team first faced the Bath County Chargers. They savored victory with an 82-64 score. This only furthered their hopes and aspirations for a great season.

The winning season continued on through the second game with a score of 80-57, but they suffered an unfortunate loss in their third game against Pendleton County.

This pattern continued throughout the season, switching back and forth between wins and losses, as they put their all into every game. After defeating Hanman in the first round of sectionals, they faced the Tygart Valley Bulldogs in a very exciting final game. The Warriors claimed a glorious victory with a score of 51-41, which sent them on to the regional game for the second year in a row! They unfortunately lost to the Gilmer County Titans with a 42-66 score, which ended their hopes for a state tournament appearance.

All of the suffering and hard work only made them a stronger and more confident team for next year.

The Boys Basketball coaches for the 2001-2002 season were Robert Sheets and Frosty McNabb.

Girls Basketball

When the girls started practicing in late October, they set one goal - to get to the state tournament. Amazingly, after taking one game at a time, that dream became a reality when the girls became the first girls basketball team from Pocahontas County to make it to states.

Their first official game of the season was against the Richwood Lumberjacks, and the girls started it off with a bang.

As Coalfield Conference Champions, the girls played schools like the Tygarts Valley Bulldogs, Pendleton County Wildcats, Richwood Lumberjacks, and the Harman Panthers. After the girls beat Harman in their sectional game, a wave of new school spirit came along with them. The team defeated Gilmer in the regional finals and became champions. This hopefully meant a new tradition would be started, as the Lady Warriors advanced to states.

Taking four spirit buses along with them for the excitement, the girls traveled to play the infamous Mercer Christian team in the first round at the Charleston Civic Center. With Mercer possessing much state tournament experience, they defeated the Lady Warriors 52-21 and eventually won the entire tournament. Tausha Cassell and Malen Gurn both received

All-State Honorable Mention. Even though they lost the game, they went down in history and look forward to next season.

Enthusiastic fans Thurston Willis and Jess Burns, along with many others from P.C.H.S. cheer on the ladies at the regional game against Gilmer County, played at Elkins High School.

The girls smile in victory after they beat Harman in the sectional game. They came away with a stunning 37-33 win.

Cheerleading

The 2001 fall cheerleading season was very successful. Under the direction of new, highly skilled coaches, Rhonda Withers and Kristi Weese, the cheerleaders managed to come up with some very creative sidelines and an awesome competition routine.

This group of girls made an excellent showing during their Potomac Valley Conference and regional competitions in Martinsburg.

The 2001-2002 basketball squad was also a hit. Although the girls did not attend any cheerleading competitions, they worked extremely hard cheering for both boys and girls home games, all sectionals, regionals, and states.

They put together several new floor cheers and learned many new sidelines. They continually fundraised in order to purchase new uniforms and warmups.

The cheerleaders are preparing for their upcoming seasons. They have achieved many goals and have set higher ones to reach in future years to come.

Baseball

The 2002 Warrior baseball team started practice the beginning of March—the same time the cold, rainy weather began! The team started the season with new head coach Delmos Barb and volunteer coaches Randy Ware and Jeff Wayne.

After many postponements and cancellations, the young Warriors came together as a team and gained valuable experience, ending the season with a 6-15 record.

For the first time in the team's 7-year history, they won two sectional games; then they were defeated by Tygarts Valley in the final round of sectionals.

The Warriors will miss seniors Justin Mayhew and Carl Peck; but with much young talent on the rise, they look forward to playing again next season.

Track

The 2002 track season brought the team new smiling faces and a new coach to help ensure the track team's reputation for excellence, which continued to stand.

Coach Mike Knisely brought a breath of fresh air to the track program with improved training workouts and weightlifting to help propel the team past the expectations brought along with a first-year coach.

The new recruits for the track team quickly began to fill in the spaces left by last year's senior track participants. Conditioning began to help people get in shape and prepare for the upcoming season. The main focus for the team was that of the State Track meet, which took place in May.

The athletes worked hard all year, and the winning attitudes of Coach Knisely and the track team sent 14 participants to the State Track Meet at Laidley Field in Charleston.

A big chunk of the team's spirit left along with this year's seniors, but the track team will bounce back and new runners will emerge to help fill the void they left behind.

Freshman Ben Jewell gets a great start in the open 400 at Greenbrier East.

Junior Josh Waugh gains valuable time as he speeds up in the 110-meter high hurdles.

Getting ready to take off in the open 200 is senior Joey Schoolcraft, going for the win.

Senior Laura Walkup prepares for the open 400 for the last time at Greenbrier East High School meet.

te track meet participants are Ashley Sheets, Ben Jewell, Jonathon Burns, Jesse Burns, y Schoolcraft, Cole Mahaffey, Eric Underwood, Erin Coleman, Candace Morton, Josh augh, Malea Guin, Tausha Cassell, Caroline McKeen, and Laura Walkup.

Senior Sports

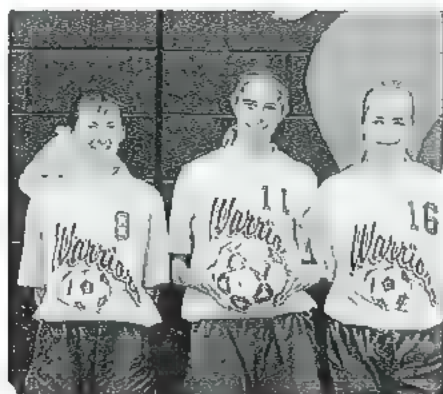

Saying goodbye is never easy to do, as this year's senior athletes learned as they ended their high school sports careers. Emotions varied throughout the seasons, from excitement to despair. Fortitude could also be found in all of the Warrior camps as teams battled for the right to play for a championship.

Over the years they gave their all in each of their respective sports to make their school proud. Hard work, determination, and dedication only begin to describe the effort that the senior athletes put forth in the games they love to play.

Seniors learned valuable lessons that in turn enabled them to leap forward in the game of life and propelled them to standards of greatness that could not be reached by "ordinary" students. The Warriors sports teams took their victories in stride and accepted their losses graciously. Throughout their sports careers, athletes attained attitudes that helped fulfill their hopes and dreams of success in life. One thing is certain--the coaches, teammates, and fans will greatly miss watching these athletes excel as Warriors.

Lacing up their track spikes for the last time are seniors Tausha Cassell, Bob Mann, Cole Mahaffey, Jesse Burns, Eric Underwood, Amanda Pritt, Laura Walkup, Jocy Schoolcraft, and Andrew Must.

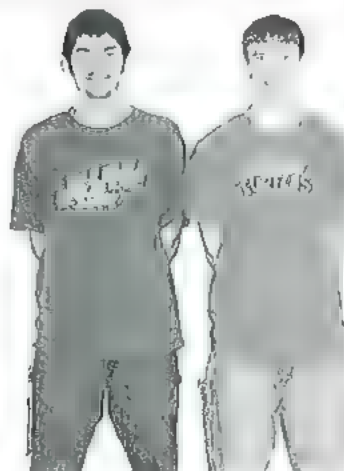

Getting their kicks for the last season as Lady Warrior soccer players are Brandy Wayne, Sarah Eilers, and Tausha Cassell.

Senior soccer leaders Ben Gochner, Jesse Burns, and Andrew Must took the field by storm for the last time as Warriors.

Seniors Eric Underwood and Cole Mahaffey swung into action for the last time as members of the Warrior golf team.

Draining their last shots as Lady Warriors competing in the state basketball tournament were Tausha Cassell and Megan Shearer.

...ing the gridiron after their senior season are football players Justin Mayhew, Justin Taylor, Ronald P. aughter, Derek Puffenbarger, Justin er, Clay Fuller, Justin Kerr, and Isaac Bennet.

Rounding off their cheerleading careers are seniors La' Nay Dilley, Amber Barker, Jessica Sharp, and Katie Sharp.

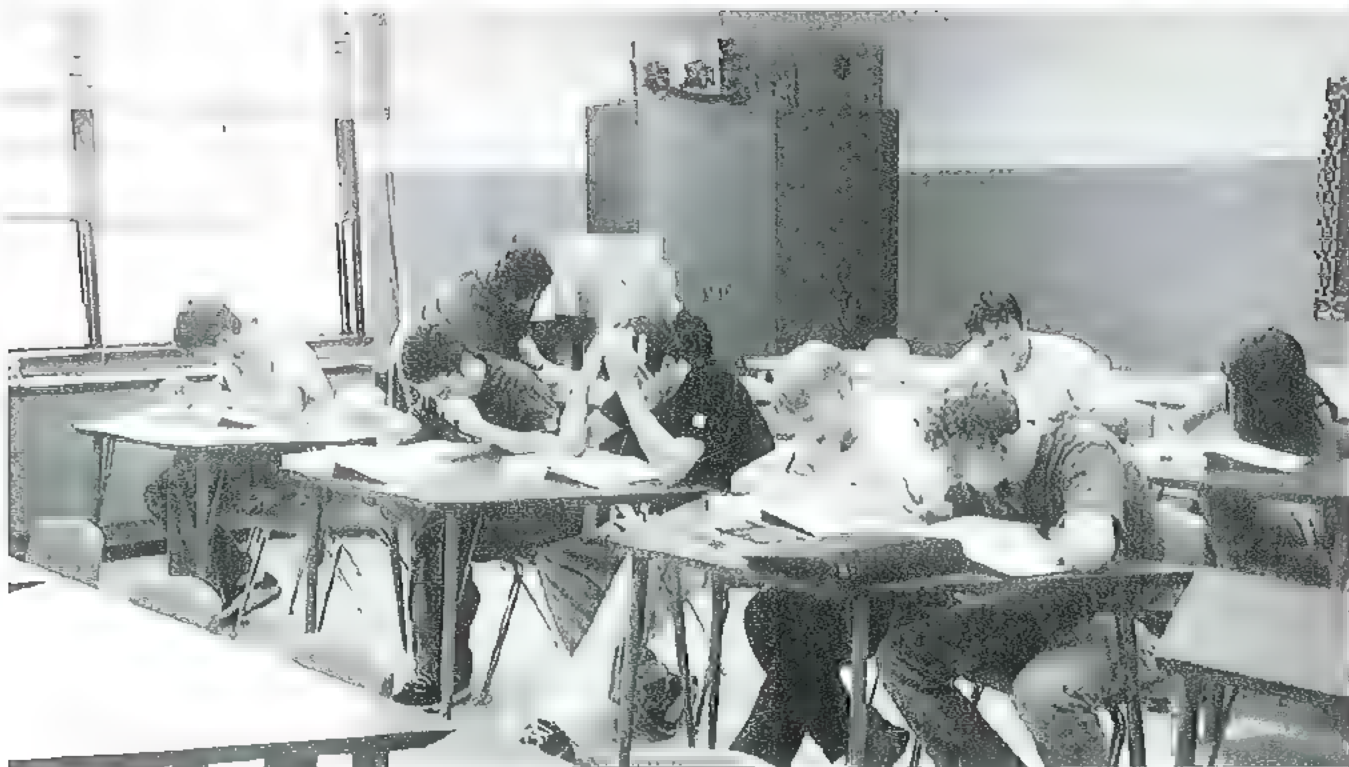

Eric Underwood and Joey Schoolcraft end their basketball careers as Sectional Champions.

Serving their last match points for the Lady Warriors volleyball team are seniors Katie Smith, Megan Shearer, Lana Gilardi, and Jessica Rhea.

Seniors Carl Peck, Kevin Withers, and Justin Mayhew swung their bats for the final time this year.

Mrs. McGee's Algebra II students study diligently before their big test.

Back To The Beginning

Senior Jessica Sheets carefully places her cookies on the baking sheet during her 3rd block culinary class.

Many changes took place this year in the academic aspect of Pocahontas County High School. Students entered classrooms to see new faces—not only new students but a few new teachers as well. Mr. Plesko, Mr. Knisely, and Mr. Marra joined the faculty. Mr. Plesko taught English/Social Studies, Mr.

Knisely headed the Health classes, and Mr. Marra taught Special Education courses.

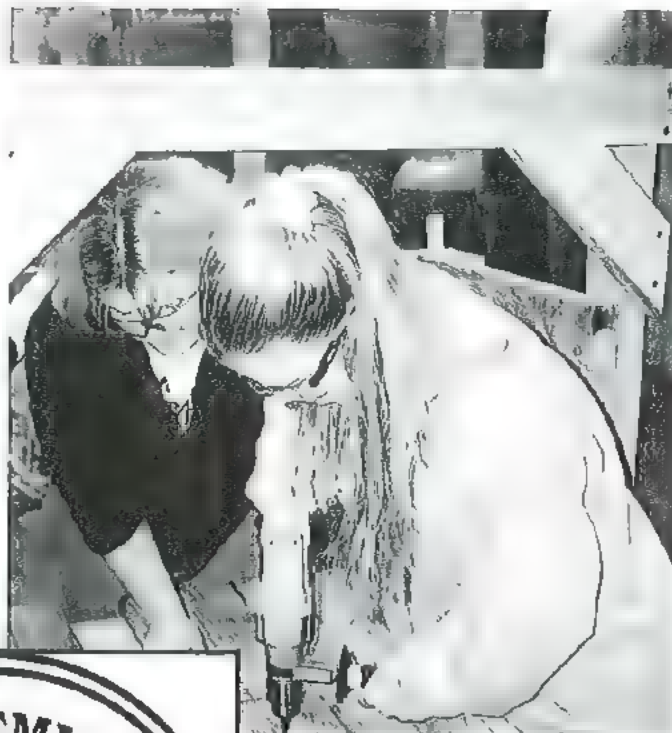

The “classic” classes were taught, such as English, History, Math, Science, Health and P.E., along with Band, Forestry, Welding, Electricity, Electronics, Foreign Languages, Art, Consumer Sciences, and Business. Other electives included Speech, College English, Calculus, A.P. English, and Sociology.

Students may choose their classes wisely; every class they take is a step toward their future. Not only must the required classes be taken, but also the core classes in each student's major area of study.

LANGUAGE ARTS

LEARNING NEW CHARACTERS OF THE SAME LANGUAGE

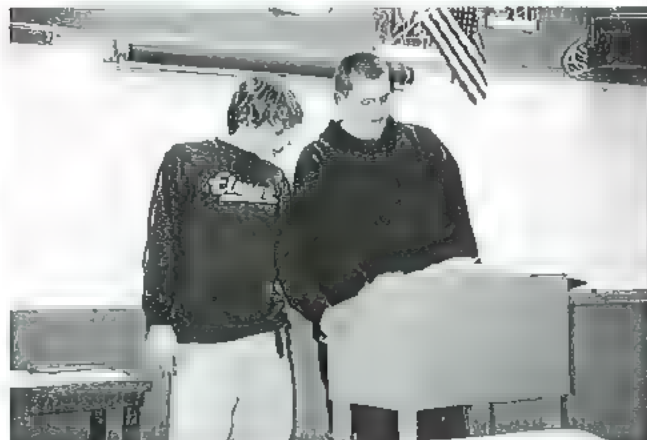

Things were different in 2001-02 for the Language Arts department. Mr. Plesko was hired to replace both Mrs. Flegel and Mrs. Keller, so he taught both Language Arts and Social Studies. This left room for very few electives. Mr. Plesko taught for two years previous to coming to P.C.H.S.

Mr. Sheets taught Language Arts and A.P. English. He also monitored a distance learning class as they were taught General Psychology through Bluefield State College. He no longer taught Sports Writing or Health, as he did previously.

Mrs. Martin's ESSH class read the book Night, which told about the Holocaust. They also performed skits portraying the events of the book Utopia and a story called "The Lais of the Werewolf." In addition to ESSH, Mrs. Martin taught Language Arts and her second year of Print/Design.

Mrs. VanReenan continued to teach Language Arts and College Speech. She also directed the Theater class, which performed "Merry Regiment of Women" and "Cinderella Syndrome."

Mr. Sheets's A.P. English class read the book Tess of the D'Urbervilles. Junior Malea Gum is trying to enjoy this book as she reads through it

In Mr. Plesko's third block Language Arts class, senior Adam Cumas and junior Damian Kinnison are presenting a Scooby-Doo movie (analyzed for character of an epic).

On January 12, the theater class performed at P.C.H.S. Senior Jesse Burns and junior Susanna Diller portrayed "Romeo" and "Juliet."

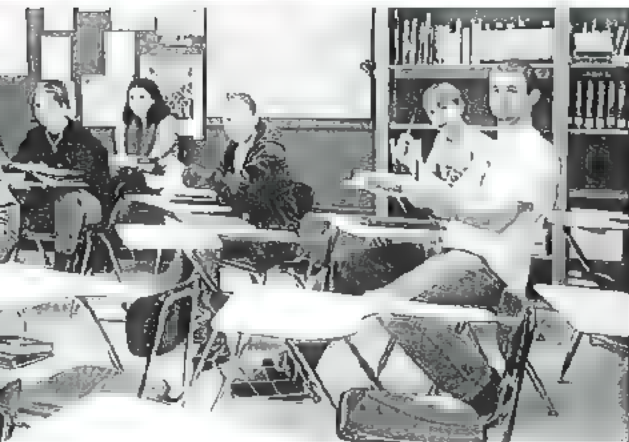

The play "Stop Talking" was performed by freshmen Amanda Wiley and Hazel Ervine at the special evening of drama in January. They both did a great job portraying their characters.

In the computer lab is sophomore Michele Eads, typing for Mrs. Martin's second block Language Arts class.

Academics/Language Arts

Mrs. Martin's fourth block Language Arts class are freshmen Ryan [name], Brian Norrod, Kayla Jordan, Rachel Tribbett, and sophomore [name] Tawney. They are writing a snapshot at the beginning of class.

Freshman Erin Wooddell is reciting a poem for Mrs. Martin's ESSH class.

MATHEMATICS

WORKING FRONT TO BACK

Mathematics is a very complicated and very interesting subject. A lot of cooperation and thinking skills are needed.

Three math courses are required to be taken during a student's high school career. Math courses available are: Algebra-Geometry Prep, Algebra I Part One, Algebra I Part Two, and Algebra I with Mrs. Rhea; Geometry and Algebra II with Mrs. McGee and Mrs. Brown; and College Trigonometry and Precalculus with Mrs. McGee. Along with the classes available, an activity period remediation is available one day a week, along with tutoring every day.

Algebra classes reviewed basic operations, solved equations and inequalities, practiced graphing, and were introduced to polynomials. Geometry classes learned about right triangles, inductive reasoning, deductive reasoning, congruent triangles, parallel lines, quadrilaterals, points, lines, and planes. Algebra II classes studied systems of equations, polynomial operations, radicals, rational exponents, and quadratic equations. College trigonometry studied right triangle trigonometry, circular functions, trigonometric equations, inverse trig functions, and graphics. Precalculus studied linear, polynomial, rational, and logarithmic functions.

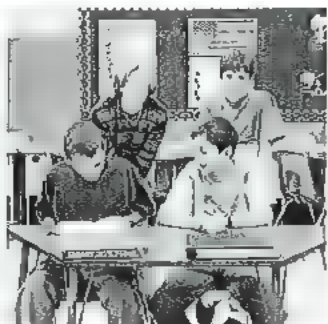

Students have had a very busy year expanding their mathematics skills.

Sophomore Jonathan Kelley is racking his brain trying to think of a way to work out his math problem in Mrs. Rhea's 2nd Block Algebra I Part 2 class.

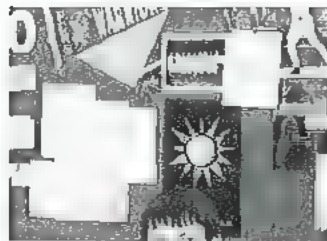

Evan Dale, Chad McFalls, Wes Burks, and Josh Smith receive a little help of their newly given assignment in Mrs. McGee's third block Algebra 2 class.

Academics/Math

Enjoying a moment of free time in their fourth block geometry class with Mrs. McGee are freshmen Andy Wayne, Erin Wooddell, Nathan Rittenhouse, and Daniel Lacasse.

SCIENCE

From Frogs to Families

Science is one of the subjects that requires the most work here at Pocahontas County High School. Along with completing the extensive labs that are now required, students must memorize elements, learn muscles and bones, and learn all sorts of things about the earth.

The science subjects that are offered are Integrated Science 9, Integrated Science 10, Chemistry, Environmental Earth Science, and Anatomy and Physiology.

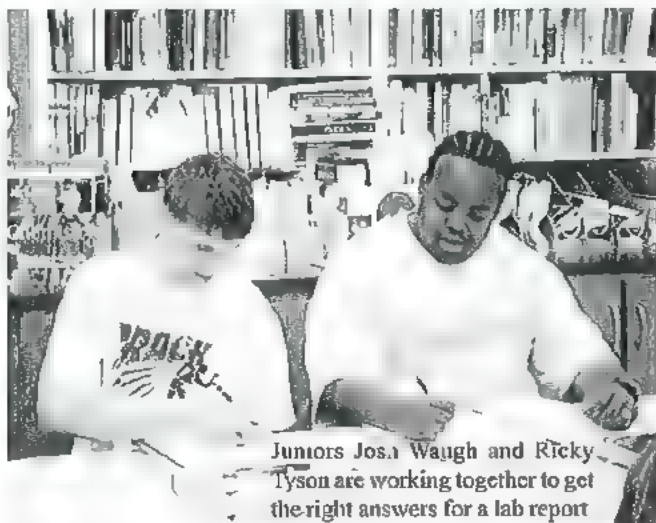

The Integrated Science 9 classes did periodic table research so that students could search, find, and remember the family names and the atomic numbers of the elements in the families. In Integrated Science 10, students were introduced to anatomy and physiology by dissecting a frog and studying the muscles and the bones. Chemistry classes learned about atom structures, atomic numbers, and atomic mass. Anatomy and Physiology students also completed a dissection project, but their "victims" were cats. Dissecting a cat allowed the students to identify all the muscles and joints in the body.

Since three science credits are required, students are exposed to many interesting aspects of the world of science.

Getting ready to finish her lab in Environmental Earth Science with Mrs. Sharpes is senior Melinda Hannah.

Making "gack" at her desk in Applied Chemistry class is senior Kati Sharp

Juniors Jos.A Waugh and Ricky Tyson are working together to get the right answers for a lab report

In the Science 10 class with Mrs. Sharpes, the students look very interested in what's going on.

Sophomores Josh Kramer and Josh Wiley look as if they are bored while doing their lab in their Science 9 class.

"Sometimes you make the right decision. Sometimes you have to make the decision right."

--M.S. Burns

In Chemistry class, senior Carl Peck is doing a lab with a pop bottle.

Sophomore Devin McCoy looks stumped on an experiment in his science 10 class

In Integrated Science 9, freshman Ashley Tallman and sophomore Jeremy Fitzgerald are working on a lab together on the elements in the periodic table.

SOCIAL STUDIES

Reflections of Time

Geography also was not available.

Even though we lost much, we also gained a new member to the staff, Mr. Chad Plesko. He taught World History and American History I, along with some Language Arts classes.

Enrichment was small, but the class of three enjoyed the independence they had. They were able to accomplish much because they were so small in number.

Satellite classes, which are more commonly referred to as distance learning courses, were also available both on the high school and college levels. Two high school classes were available: AP Calculus and Japanese II. When the students took the exam in the spring for AP Calculus, if they scored a three or above, the credit became a dual credit, both high school and college.

Some college classes were broadcast from Greenbrier Community College Center and had an interactive system, which allowed two-way communication, wherein the student could talk directly to the college professor and vice versa.

Mr. Stewart lectures to his American History II class on our country's history and its important role in the world today.

The Social Studies Department suffered quite a loss in 2001-2002 by losing a teacher and two classes. Mrs. Keller, a social studies teacher at P.C.H.S. for 24 years, retired, making the 2000-2001 school year the last in her P.C.H.S. teaching career. Government class was not provided this year, and

Mr. Stewart takes a relaxing break during lunch, after dealing with two morning Social Studies classes.

Mr. Plesko checks one of his students' papers to make sure they understand the assignment.

The fourth block Psychology class listens to the teacher from Sophomore Jerri Curry asks her third block teacher, Mr. Plesko, a question concerning the newly given assignment.

Academics/Social Studies

Students Kelly Blechl and Clay Bell and sophomore Kevin Weimer listen to Mrs. Vance's instructions on their upcoming project in first block ESSH class.

MAKING LIFE BETTER

During the 2001-02 school year Mr. Hall directed the band in their marching season with the show "Rock And Roll Explosion." In the Stonewall Showcase of Bands in Staunton, VA, the band placed 4th overall; Drum Major Andrew Lacasse received 1st place; Aux. received 1st place; and the Percussion received 3rd.

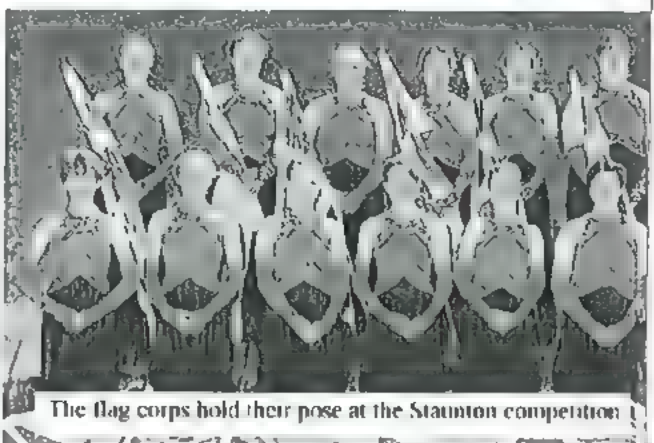

Next the band competed at the Mountain State Forest Festival in Ellins. The band placed 1st for Drum Major, Aux., Percussion, and 1st overall in the parade. They received 1st overall, 1st for Drum Major, 2nd for Aux., and 3rd for Percussion in the field show competition.

In the field show competition at the Oak Hill Classic, they placed 2nd for Drum Major, 2nd for Auxiliaries, 1st for Percussion, and 2nd overall. The band also delighted the public with Christmas and Spring Concerts along with the jazz band and choir. They also attended ratings at Bridgeport High School on April 24, where they received a rating of two, or excellent, on a scale from one to five, one being superior.

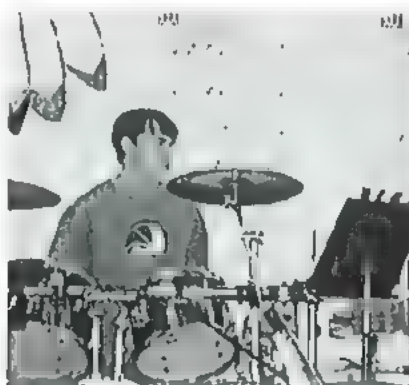

The jazz band performed at the Opera House along with the choir. They also performed at Snowshoe and a few of the home basketball games.

In Guitar class, students learned to play popular songs like Lynyrd Skynyrd's "Sweet Home Alabama" and Green Day's "Good Riddance."

Students were taught about rhythms, musical definitions, the history of music, and much more in Mr. Hall's Music Appreciation class.

The flag corps hold their pose at the Staunton competition

Senior Cole Mahaffey is playing the song "Cut To The Chase" with the jazz band.

On December 19, the band, jazz band, and choir performed a Christmas concert for the public. The band is playing one of their Christmas songs as the crowd gets into the holiday spirit

The P.C. II S. Marching Band is competing in Staunton, VA. They went on to place fourth overall.

The Jazz Band performed at numerous basketball games. Juniors Cassandra Channell, Susanna Diller, and senior Jared Morton are jazzing with their trombones on the gym stage.

After the competition at Staunton, VA, the band had a group picture taken. Students smiled as they sweated in their warm uniforms.

Practicing in Mr. Hall's Guitar I class is senior Zac Bergum.

Academics/Band & Music

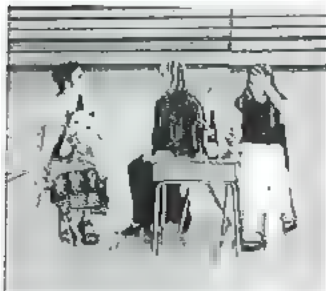

Performing for the Christmas Concert are freshmen Kaitasha Lambert, Miranda Means and senior Ashley Moore.

In August the band has a five-day band camp to prepare for the upcoming marching season. These seniors hate to see it all end.

ART AND FOREIGN LANGUAGE

THE RIGHT SIDE OF THE BRAIN

In June 2001, some of the French club members traveled to Montreal, Quebec, in Canada. They frolicked among French-speaking Canadians and danced on a boat on the St. Lawrence River.

In November, the annual Foreign Language Festival was held, featuring skits, songs, posters, and cooking. Awards were given at the end of the festival. Junior Jeff Butler received a $50 savings bond for being the most outstanding French student, while junior Molly Must won $25 in cash for designing the cover of the book. Middle school students from Marlinton and Green Bank also participated in the festival.

The Christmas art show was held in December with art work displayed by students in all levels.

Art students continue to spotlight their creative side, as French and Spanish students still progress in developing their skills in a new language.

Showing off their artistic ability are seniors Jessica Sharp and Katie Sharp. As you can see, the twin sisters get along well.

Performing "Blanche Neige" at the Foreign Language Festival are junior Greer Hughes and senior Jesse Burns. Around 200 people came to see the performances.

President of the French Honor Society, junior Rachel Garringer recites a poem while seniors Amanda Pritt and Sarah Eilers wait to induct new members.

During French 2, freshmen Ben Jewell, Clay Bell, Jillian Weiford, Lisa Burns, Lucy Mosesso, Amanda Wiley, and Erin Woodell "put the petal to the metal" to finish their assignment before the bell rings.

Senior Andrew Lacasse starts a new project in his independent study art class. Andrew spent all of 4th block in the art room.

Academics/Art & Foreign Language

OFFICE AND LIBRARY

A FRIENDLY OUTLOOK

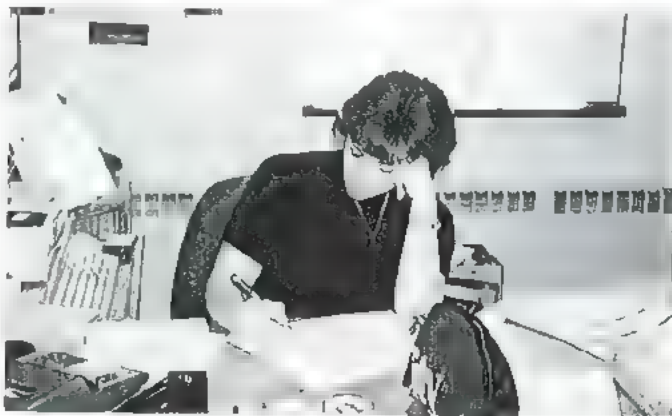

The men and women who work in the office and library at P.C.H.S. go out of their way to help the students gather information and present it with excellence. If students need help with college information or just a solution for an everyday problem, Mrs. Beverage and Mr. Rexrode, the guidance counselors, are eager to lend a helping hand.

Information is now easier to gather after the library got a "face lift." The new arrangement allows for instant access to all sorts of information and a more enjoyable experience with the expertise of Ms. Chappell.

Most people think a long trip to the office means disciplinary action, but this does not always hold true. The folks in the office are ready and willing to lend a helping hand. Secretary Nancy Rexrode will always be there to tell you if Mr. Sanders or Mr. Brock is in. Accountant Brenda Dilley is another friendly face that you'll find in the office. Mrs. Dilley fills in behind the counter when Mrs. Rexrode is out, and she also takes care of all the money matters.

The office, library, and guidance offices are just a few of the student-friendly places that you will find at P.C.H.S.

You can't mess with the best. Principal Tom Sanders and Assistant Principal Allen Brock help uphold the rules and regulations at P.C.H.S.

Finishing a tedious day of paperwork is secretary/accountant Mrs. Brenda Dilley.

HEALTH AND PHYSICAL EDUCATION

about the basics of team sports and participated in various activities, such as volleyball, football, track, dodgeball, basketball, and speedball. Students challenged their bodies in the physical fitness test, where they had to accomplish fitness tasks at a reasonable level of difficulty. They also completed a lesson on first aid.

In Health, students were taught about the care and well-being of their bodies. They were involved in group discussions and lectures led by Mr. Knisely. The students learned more about themselves and others by discussing high school issues and fitness. Wellness was a term which was examined very closely by the students, and it helped them get a better sense of themselves.

Practicing their balance and golf skills are freshmen Whitney Curr, Dustin Reynolds, Dougie Holson, and Steven J. Sharp.

Testing their physical fitness are freshmen Allison Burns, Hannah Hollandsworth, and Lucy Mosesso.

Working attentively on their health assignment are sophomores Brittany Burner, Caroline McKean, and Erin Coleman.

Stretching in preparation for their physical fitness class are freshmen Carie Sharp, Keri Liptap, MaJordan, Sheme Phillips, and junior Shannon tryler.

Hard at work is junior Trista Rexrode in her 3rd block health class.

DRIVER EDUCATION AND CONSUMER SCIENCES

To educate and prepare themselves for "real life," many students enroll in the optional Driver Education and Consumer Science courses. Consumer Science is a cluster of classes that allow students to learn about taking care of themselves and their future friends and family.

GAINING INDEPENDENCE

This group includes Human Development, Travel WV, Culinary I and II, Lodging Management, Home Ec. I and Parenting.

Driver Education and Parenting are taken during the same term in nine-week intervals. In order to get into the Driver Ed./Parenting class, students must be or turn 16 before the term ends. While in these classes the students learn the responsibilities of driving and also childhood development techniques.

Human Development and Relationships allows students to learn how to promote growth and development in their everyday relationships. Culinary I and II teach the fundamentals of professional food preparation. The students also learn budgeting skills, customer relations, and marketing.

Exciting new renovations took place over the summer at P.C.H.S. The Home Economics kitchen was updated with all new, more professional equipment. This project was funded by a grant given to P.C.H.S. from the state.

Mrs. VanReenen's third block Culinary II students "cram" for their final exam. Because of the tourism business, these courses have become very popular.

iors Richard Johnston, Brandon Kelly, and Arthur Sharp participate in fun classroom activity during their Driver Education class.

Sophomores Evan Sheets, Ashley McNabb, and Jerri Curry work as a group to finish worksheets in their Travel West Virginia class.

Academics/Driver Ed. & Consumer Sciences

BUILDING CONSTRUCTION AND WELDING

Introduction to Welding and Welding I and II are very interesting classes offered at Pocahontas County High School. Taught by Mr. Irvine, students are given the opportunity to learn the important skills of the art of welding and are prepared for life in general. First term, the welding classes built a trailer. The rest of their time was spent in the classroom studying textbooks or in the shop completing miscellaneous welding jobs.

Another vocational class offered to students is Building Construction, taught by Mr. Gibson. His first-term classes built a set of bleachers for the band at football games. The Building Construction II class ventured to Grafton Homes for a field trip. Stretching across both terms, the Construction classes worked on building a modular house in the main parking lot.

FORESTRY & VO/AG

"Outside" the Boundaries

It's signup day at P.C.H.S. It has taken you forever to figure out what classes you want, now comes the time to see if you can get them. When you walk into the room, you immediately notice two long chains of students lined up where Mr. Burns and Mr. Riley, Forestry and Vocational-Agriculture teachers, sit. These classes are so popular that they are difficult to get into, unless you are one of the first to go to sign up.

Courses offered include Introduction to Forestry and Forestry I and II. Also included are Wildlife Management, Agricultural Production I and II, Greenhouse Management, Agricultural Mechanics I, and Agriscience. These classes all pertain to the outdoors and the scientific studies thereof.

In these classes, students do many activities that do not just require sitting at a desk, although some of that is included as well. They include going out-of-doors, interacting with animals, learning how to grow your own plants, learning classifications of trees, and many other exciting things that allow you to take a nice break from your required core classes.

These classes are generally fun as well as very informative. As most vocational classes do, they very often lead to future careers for many of the students involved.

Trying to fix a tractor are junior Daniel Simmons and senior Brian Bennett during their third block Vo-Ag class.

A tractor helps unload the fruit for the FFA fundraiser.

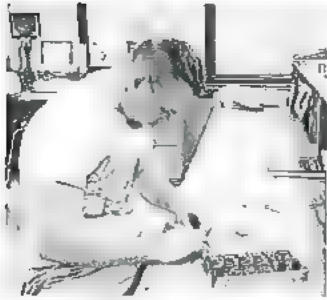

Juniors Brandon Kelly, Josh Waugh, and Daryn Hammons and senior Daniel Simmons discuss safety in their Ag. Mechanics class.

Senior Minnie Tawney and sophomore Mindy Matheny are working on a salt box in their Ag. II class.

ELECTRICITY & ELECTRONICS

Totally Wired

The Electricity and Electronics Departments are among the most popular here at P.C.H.S.

Mr. Ziegler and Mr. Beverage head the two departments. The classes include Introduction to Electricity, Electricity I, Electricity II, Introduction to Electronics, Electronics

I and II, and the CISCO courses.

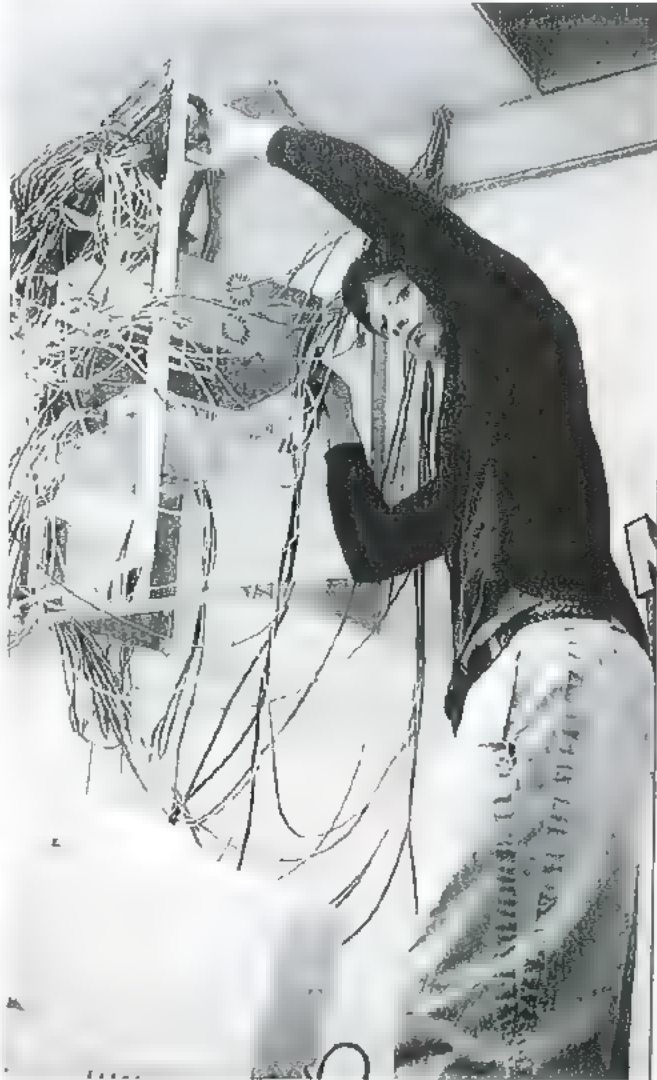

In the Electricity classes, students learn the basics of dealing with electricity, Ohm's Law, basic residential wiring techniques, rewiring, and renovation of residential wiring. In Electricity I and II, the students get an advanced teaching and enhance their basic skills.

Electronics students are taught the basics of electronics, which include soldering and circuit construction, the use of multi-meters, oscilloscopes, electronic power supplies, and other test equipment.

There are four CISCO courses that are offered to students, which introduce advanced students to classroom and laboratory experience in the computer networking field.

The CISCO class wired many of the computers at P.C.H.S. for Internet usage. They also were taught how to put IP addresses in the computers.

Senior Daniel Boggs is working hard trying to help Mr. Beverage wire the Business Education room during his second block class.

BUSINESS & JOURNALISM

Reflection Of Communication

Business and Journalism classes offered were: Keyboarding, Introduction to Business, Computer Applications, Advanced Computer Applications, Print Design, Yearbook, and Accounting. All the business courses were taught by Mrs. Stewart. Mrs. Martin taught Print Design, which is a student-run business, and Mrs. Rhea advised the School Yearbook class.

Freshmen were no longer required to take Keyboarding, but many still found it a very worthwhile course. They were taught correct typing procedures, word processing, spreadsheet and database usage.

Introduction to Business prepared students for the economic world. Computer Applications and Advanced Computer Applications expanded on skills learned in Keyboarding and also included desktop publishing and presentation software.

Print Design is a student-operated enterprise headed by Mrs. Martin. The "employees" of the class learn how to use a computer to design and sell items such as address labels, calendars, brochures, and cards. All the proceeds are reinvested in the business.

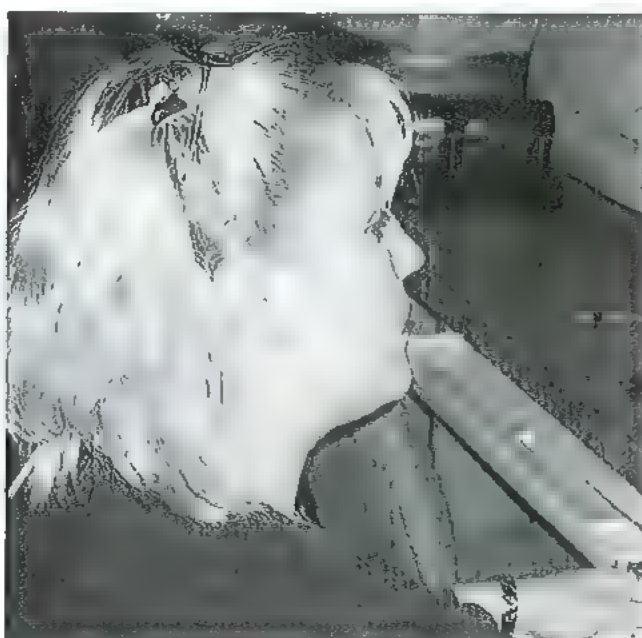

Mrs. Rhea's yearbook class has the overwhelming responsibility of designing, editing, and producing a yearbook that is pleasing to students, faculty, and the community in general.

Sophomore Sarah Beard is typing continuously, trying to make sure she finishes her assignment before the bell rings in Mrs. Stewart's third block keyboarding class.

Senior Katie Smith concentrates on finishing the final touches on the Student Life divider in Mrs. Rhea's third block yearbook class.

Seniors Susan Wilkins, Marshall Shearer, Tiffany Ryder and Jessica Sheets work fast to finish their accounting worksheets in Mr. Stewart's first block Accounting I class.

Junior Mikey Valache and sophomore Ashley McNabb are working away, typing a business letter for Mrs. Stewart's first term, second block Business Computer Applications class

Senior Selina Burgess is focusing hard on completing a test in her first block class. Selina is taking an independent study in Advanced Accounting.

Graduation

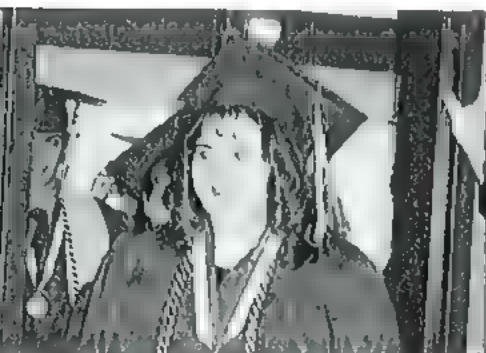

Graduation was held on June 1 at 2:00 in the Pocahontas County Gym, with a graduating class of 94 students. The ceremony began with a welcome address given by Tausha Cassell and Jesse Burn. They then handed it over to the class Valedictorian, Kama Weatherholt, who spoke about how life is different in such a small place and that it will be hard to leave it all behind. Honor graduates Amanda Pritt, Laura Walkup, Jessica Dean, Melissa Hill, Selina Burgess, Kristi Hamons, Melinda Hannah, Robert Mann, and Brandy Wayne joined together in reading the story "All the Places You Will Go" by Dr. Seuss. Susan Wilkins then gave an Address of Appreciation to all those who had helped the students throughout their high school careers.

Katie Smith presented the class of 2002, and diplomas were handed out by senior homeroom teachers. Afterwards Jesse Burns and Tausha Cassell once again spoke, saying their farewells to classmates, and their farewells to high school and friends.

The two juniors with the highest GPA for 2002 were Allison Norrod and Natasha McMann, graduation marshals.

Class of 2002...

Seniors Nick Coleman, Justin Buzzard, Thomas Brown, and Janet Biggs wait in line for Mr. Sanders to hand them their diplomas.

EXIT

The group waits for Mr. Sanders to tell them to move their tassels to the other side so they can toss up the caps. Mr. Sanders praised the class of 2002 for being the best to graduate since he became the principal.

The waiting continues as senior La'Nay Dilley stands patiently with a smile until Mr. Rexrode gives her the okay to go.

Governor Bob Wise visited P.C.H.S. in May to present 13 seniors with "Promise Scholarships" to further their education at West Virginia colleges.

Recognitions

Many banquets were held in the Spring to recognize students who had excelled in various areas throughout the school year.

The FFA banquet recognized the achievements of its members by rewarding them with certificates and awards. This banquet also acknowledged those in the community who gave their support to FFA members in all their endeavors.

The Achievement Dinner, which is sponsored by the National Honor Society and local banks, recognized those students who have shown excellence in academic, artistic, and/or vocational endeavors. This banquet also celebrated the twentieth year of the joining of the National Honor Society and the local banks. One of the newest scholarships established at P.C.H.S. was the Gay and Becky Shinaberry Scholarship Program for young women. This scholarship provides a deserving young lady seeking a minimum of a bachelor's degree with $20,000, $5,000 per year. The recipient of the scholarship this year was Jessica Dean, who is planning to attend Glenville State College.

The Athletic Banquet, which was held May 29, recognized all athletes for their participation. Athletes were presented certificates, awards, and scholarship recognitions. The winners of some of the awards included Tausha Cassell and Jesse Burns, who were awarded the June Riley Math/Athlete Award. Tausha Cassell was also awarded the Intrawest Scholarship from Snowshoe. The two students named Coalfield Conference's Athletes of the Year were Eric Underwood and Tausha Cassell.

Awards Day acknowledged those students who had excelled in academic, athletics, and vocational courses. Students who received scholarships were also acknowledged. Awards Day was a wonderful way for students to receive recognition for their hard work and dedication.

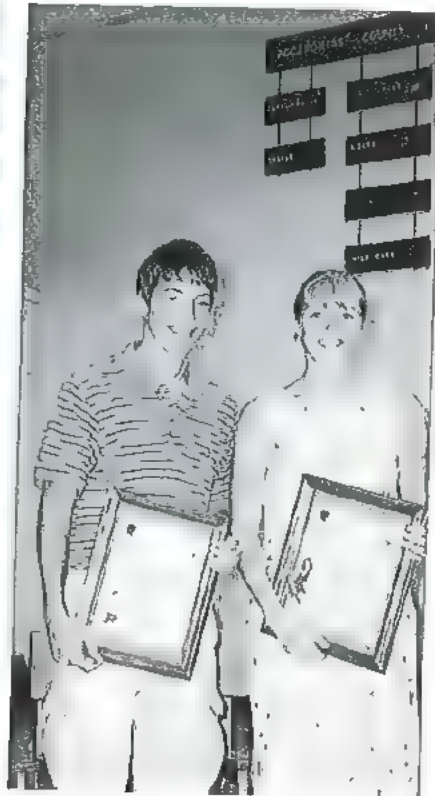

Awards and Honors

Mr. Sheets presents Megan Shearer with the Arch Wooddell Sportsmanship Award during the annual Athletic Banquet held at P.C.H.S.

President of the FFA, Timothy VanReenen, opens the FFA banquet with a brief introduction about the FFA and what it is all about.

Jesse Burns and Tausha Cassell are proud to be recognized for being awarded the June Riley Math/Athlete award.

Eric Underwood was given the honor of receiving Beulah Moore Memorial scholarship.

Janet Biggs and La'Nay Dilley were given music scholarships from Glenville State College

Susan Wilkins, State Vice President of the FFA, presented the Greenhand award to those members working toward a career in the agricultural field.

Chuck Weed, a representative for Snowshoe, presented Tausha Cassell with the $1,000 Intrawest Snowshoe Athletic scholarship.

This year's recipients of the honor of being named Coalfield Conference Athletes of the Year are Eric Underwood and Tausha Cassell. Mike Burns and John Snyder were named Coalfield Conference Coaches of the Year.

Closing

The time quickly arrived for the 2001-2002 school year to end. The school year was fun and exciting for most students.

There were many fun and energetic activities throughout the year. Many assemblies were held, not only for students to learn but to enjoy themselves and be able to have a little fun as well.

There were many student activities that were popular, such as the girls playing powderpuff football and the boys showing off their unknown cheerleading talents during Spirit Week. Buying their ownelves at the Christmas elf auction was fun for some, and it also raised money for a worthwhile cause.

During the year P.C.H.S. had a foreign exchange student, Xi Wei, from China. Xi Wei participated in many of the activities throughout the year. He played soccer, which he enjoyed very much, and joined band and choir. Xi Wei worked hard to understand the English language and progressed rapidly in his speaking. He worked very hard to keep his grades high and was proud of his grade point average. He made several new friends and would miss them when he returned to China.

For the most part, the year was most enjoyable. The students learned a lot, not only in their academic classes, but about themselves as well.

Ending Another Chapter

shman Eddie Bennett and sophomore Rebecca Connor are finishing a lab in Mrs. White's block science class.
